THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF PEACE UNTIL CHINA'S SOVEREIGNTY AND TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY ARE RESTORED.

China long ago prepared for the loss of both Canton and Hankow, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek warned the people as long ago as March that they must be prepared for the loss of the cities.

This is part of a semi-official statement issued in Chungking, the war capital, last night.

Officially, it is stated that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is with his troops, now taking up strong positions south-west of Hankow.

He has no intention of resigning or of making peace overtures with Japan.

The semi-official announcement from Chungking states that China's national policy since the beginning of the war has remained unaltered. It will be followed in the future, no matter how grave the situation becomes.

"So long as China's sovereignty and territorial integrity are not restored, the war of resistance with the aggressor will not be abandoned."

"Under present conditions, there is no basis for mediation by Third Powers."

In an editorial this morning the Central Daily News, official Chungking organ of the National Government, reminds the Chinese people that the National Government will not in any circumstances deviate from its pre-determined policy, or show hesitancy or misgivings in its execution.

CHIANG'S PREDICTION

In this instance, it is recalled that in an exclusive interview with the Hongkong "Telegraph" last May, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek warned China that it must be prepared for the loss of Hankow within three months.

The Japanese entry into the Wuhan cities was prolonged to October by the determined resistance of the Chinese troops who, considering all the disadvantages under which they fought, apparently surprised even their own leaders with the tenacity.

VOLUNTARY ABANDONMENT

Hankow, Oct. 25.
The official spokesman of the Military Affairs Commission declared to-day that the Chinese Army has made preparations for the voluntary abandonment of the Wuhan nucleus in its war operations.

The spokesman said new plans for continuing the present war have been mapped out, and the enemy advance will be dealt with accordingly.

The spokesman emphasized that this decision is a necessary step in the Chinese strategy of re-aligning its military strength, and absolutely does not spell negative retreat.

Questioned as to the highlights of the new Chinese military plan, the spokesman declined to commit himself, pointing out that these touch upon military secrets which he could not reveal.

The spokesman explained that in mapping out a general plan for her military operations, China must take into consideration, aside from the necessity of exacting the highest toll from the enemy, the most effective means of preserving and strengthening her resisting power for prolonging the war.

In the past six months, he continued, China has inflicted a heavy toll on the enemy and thus attained her objective of wearing out the invader's strength.

The important significance of the defence of Wuhan, the spokesman said, is not so much the safeguarding of the tri-cities themselves from enemy invasion as the protection of the whole man-power and material resources of southeastern and central China in their removal northward to ensure a firm foundation for a drawn-out war.

This great exodus of China's resources has now completed and with its completion the tri-cities of Wuhan have lost their importance from a general point of view in the nation's resistance scheme against Japan, he pointed out.

The spokesman stated that throughout the course of the present war, it has been China's aim always to force her own initiative on the Japanese. Now that the great objective of defending Wuhan has been attained, the Chinese army could see no reason why they should stick to the place and wait to be encircled by the encroaching enemy.

Humanitarian considerations, furthermore, have lent weight to the military authorities' decision on this step. If the Chinese army were to remain, the large numbers of helpless women and children who have not had the chance to evacuate would be plunged into the direst horrors of war, the spokesman said.

The important point to note is, the spokesman stressed, is this Chinese decision, far from a negative retreat, is in fact positive evidence of the nation's determination to prolong the struggle.—Central News.

Dollar Liner Incident Not Closed, Says U.S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.

Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, to-day indicated that the Coolidge incident, in which the President liner was forced to sail from Shanghai to-day without a cargo of silver because the Japanese authorities refused to give a clearance permit, is not closed.

He revealed that Mr. Gause, the American Consul-General has protested to the Chinese Commissioner of Customs, and added that the State Department was still gathering information on the matter.—United Press.

WUHAN EVACUATION COMPLETED

Three Cities Blazing At

CHUNGKING, Oct. 25.
IN ACCORDANCE with a pre-conceived plan Chinese forces completed their strategic withdrawal from the Wuhan cities yesterday.

All Chinese troops evacuated are said to have safely reached pre-arranged positions outside the Wuhan area, where they will continue to resist the Japanese invaders. The withdrawal is described as orderly and involving little losses.

Prior to the withdrawal, all government buildings, utility plants and structures of military significance, including the aerodrome, bridges and railway stations were dynamited by the Chinese.

Practically all able-bodied men were also evacuated from the Wuhan cities in order to prevent the Japanese from making use of them, whilst civilians who remain behind are placed in care of the Refugee Zone Committee.

The Wuhan cities were still ablaze last night. Huge fires licked skyward and explosions were audible from time to time.—Central News.

125 AMERICANS AT HANKOW

Washington, Oct. 25.
The United States Consul-General, Mr. Josselyn, has reported to the State Department that there are 125 Americans in the vicinity of Hankow, of which 82 are men, 36 women, and seven children, excluding the crews of the gunboats, Luzon and Guam.

In addition, there are 12 Filipinos at Hankow.—United Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 25.
The news of the entry of Japanese troops into Hankow was announced by the shrill whistling of sirens, and immediately afterwards special editions of the papers were distributed. The whole city is agog with bustle, while immense crowds are streaming in the direction of the Imperial Palace to pay distant homage to the Emperor.

A torchlight procession will take place this evening in which hundreds of thousands are expected to participate, and celebrations are being organised in all educational establishments throughout the country.—Trans-Ocean.

STATE PROTECTION BILLS REVISED

BIG LINER AFIRE: 600 IN DANGER

Urgent Aid

New York, Oct. 25.

The Hamburg-American liner, Deutschland, 200 miles south-east of Cape Race off Newfoundland, is in distress.

She has signalled that a fire aboard is becoming "dangerous", and that help is necessary and urgent. There are 591 passengers aboard.

Company officials told the press the ship is equipped with the most modern apparatus, with fire-proof bulkheads, and they are confident of the officers' ability to keep the fire under control.

Meanwhile ships raced under forced draft en route to aid the liner, including the Norwegian s.s. Europa, the United States liner, Manhattan, and the American Farmer and America Trader s.s. Collamer.

The Europe is 75 miles from the Deutschland, steaming at 12 knots.—United Press.

ALUMINIUM LUNG

An aluminium lung, a successor to the iron lung, has been bought by the London County Council. It was announced recently.

The invention of an Australian professor of engineering, Dr. F.A. Burdett, of Melbourne, it is the first of its kind to be purchased in this country. It is stated to be far less cumbersome than the iron lung. The main use of the "lung" is in cases of infantile paralysis.

The Government appears to be calm, confident that Herr Hitler will intervene to prevent trouble with Hungary.

Meanwhile from Bratislava comes a message that the Slovakian Premier, Dr. Tiso, has gone to Prague to discuss the Hungarian plebiscite proposals.

Before his departure he spoke to the press, and said: "There is reason to believe that Herr Hitler is sympathetic to the Slovakian plans for settlement of the border dispute."—United Press.

CZECH PLANE ATTACKED

It is alleged here that a Czech military plane was attacked, and brought down in flames this afternoon, by two Hungarian pursuit planes.

The pilot was wounded, and the plane fell seven and a half miles within the Czech frontier.

The attack, state reports, occurred over the Czech town of Velkemedel.—Reuter.

In an interview Mr. Pirow stated that he would discuss with the Portuguese Government the question of former German colonies, after which he was going to London for the purpose of informing the British Government of the result of the conversations.

He added that it was not impossible that he might decide to go to Germany to discuss the question with Herr Hitler, before returning to South Africa.—Reuter.

One of the new blue wool materials makes the graceful coat frock with its Peter Pan collar, tight sleeves. The afternoon dress is in patterned marocain with its frilled front.

GOOD NEWS! For the "In-Betweens" New Frocks to Flatter You

NOT stock—yet not out-size, this was the worry of a reader who wrote to me complaining that she could never find a dress to fit.

Many women are stock fitting as far as bust and waist are concerned but their hip measurements are too large for frocks made with the usual sizes.

The patterned styles are specially designed to meet the needs of the in-between figure.

You are really in luck this season, as most of the fashion interest lies in the bodies of frocks, and it is by emphasizing the top part of your dress where you can afford extra width that you get the slenderizing line needed in the skirt.

A nice warm wool frock for early winter is your first requirement—yokes, pockets and loose sleeves trimmed with a contrasting colour are all smart details that you can be original about on the bodies.

Youthful Style

It is an attractive little dress in the new blueberry shade, with a chrysanthemum red contrast trimming round the pockets, down the front and on the sleeves to make it gay. The skirt has a single inverted pleat in front.

Pockets give you the width you need across the figure and they are fastened with zips; the same fastening is used down the front, making the dress an easy one to pop into when you are in a hurry.

These zips are quite simple to add it trained. Skilful cutting, setting and finger modelling after a shampoo transforms a poor hairline if you begin early enough.

Super brushing

At least twice a week they have a super brushing. This is done by making a series of close partings and brushing in long straight strokes well away from the scalp.

The back hair is brushed vigorously towards the front and the scalp and roots well aired. At regular intervals—about four times a year—my sister uses a tonic.

A few drops are shaken on to each parting and massaged in with a circular movement which loosens the scalp. A tight scalp is the beginning of serious hair troubles and can be prevented by proper brushing and simple massage.

Pretty tough

BRUSHING and an occasional tonic treatment will keep the natural oil glands active. An exception can be made in the case of very dry hair, which benefits from an oil bath just before a shampoo.

Scalp and hair should be saturated in warm, pure olive oil, left on for one night and then washed with shredded Castile or best green soap.

David—the baby—hates having his hair washed, brushed or "fussed." One day his father took him to a grown-up barber's and let him watch "real men" being shampooed and combed.

He thinks he's pretty tough now when he dips his red head in the bathroom basin.

Kilted Front

A dressy frock for social dates is shown in the other pattern, No. 1196. This has also been designed for the in-between figure. It has a dainty, kilted front to give width, and a bishop's sleeve to emphasise your small waist while the downward lines of skirt not only ensure a slim hip-line, but give flattering length of line to the figure below the waist.

Contrasts are an important fashion note, so a second colour has been introduced on the collar.

Juniper or beagle green are my choice for this dress, with an ecorse or pastel tinted collar if you like a light colour next to your face, otherwise clover or Chinese lacquer red give you an original combination.

Be A Quick Shopper

DO you, as a housewife, complain of never having a minute to yourself? If so, save time on the daily shopping. Methodical attention may give you a few hours extra leisure weekly.

Prepare for your expedition by writing down the names of shops to be visited and articles required. A convenient order is with the most distant shop put first. You then only carry things once, which saves fatigue.

The method of asking for goods is either a help or a hindrance. Don't fuss! State what you require clearly, asking for certainties first and leaving queries until afterwards. Neither you nor the assistant will then get muddled; this saves his time and patience too.

Tendering the exact money is always a help; but if this is impossible, ask for change at the place where you know much money is taken. Minutes pass quickly while waiting at smaller shops for change to be obtained.

Wait your turn quietly. Other people's time is as valuable as yours. The ordinarily observant shopkeeper will notice and serve you as soon as possible. On the other hand, never wait in a shop where you are deliberately ignored.

No good shopper stands talking on the pavement. It is inconsiderate to block the way of others who may be pressed for time. Friends all bent on the same errand will usually prefer a smile and cheery word in passing.

Carrying different sorts of commodities sensibly prevents waste of time in readjusting them on the homeward journey. Either have a stout piece of cardboard, forming a partition, in the centre of your basket, or take two carriers. One for meat and vegetables and the other for cleaner goods.

Above all, wear your most comfortable pair of shoes.

Salt Service

IF a pinch of salt is added when stewing fruit, it brings out the full flavour.

It is not generally known that if new coloured garments are put into cold salt water for ten minutes before they are washed, this will fix the dye and prevent any likelihood of the colours running.

City dwellers will find that if curtains are steeped in salt water before washing, they will be much easier to wash, because salt removes the soot from them.

The task of scraping new potatoes is made much easier if a little salt is dissolved in the water.

Teacups very often become discoloured inside, but the stains can very easily be removed if they are rubbed with a damp cloth which has been dipped in salt. A little salt on a damp cloth will also remove the brown stains on egg spoons.

Eggs with thin shells often crack when being boiled, and most of the white is wasted; but if a teaspoonful of salt is sprinkled in the water, the whites will not come through the shells.

Fibre brushes will last much longer if they are steeped in a strong solution of salt and water, before using. This hardens the fibre, and lengthens their life considerably.

Add a little salt to the water in which cut flowers are placed, and they will keep fresh.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on a carpet will prevent stains. If carpets are given an occasional "dry clean" with salt they will come up like new.

Simply sprinkle salt on the carpet, and brush well. Carpets treated in this way always look fresh and new.

Ink stains are easy to remove if salt is put on the ink immediately it is spilt.

Salt will quickly put out a fire in the chimney. Throw a few handfuls of salt on the fire in the grate, and in a few minutes the trouble will be overcome.

My Sister's Family by Kathleen Allison

When I was young, it was penny straight or tuppence curly. In our pre-war nursery, wiry corkscrews or insignificant plaits did their worst by us.

Even when the scissors released us from the bondage of combs, slides and black ribbons, our coiffures remained singularly unbecoming.

Memories of her own "skinned rabbit" locks made my sister begin early on her daughter's hair. And she didn't forget her sons, either. The other day she had the satisfaction of hearing her Mary say:

"I like my hair to be smarty"

SMALL girls need their hair "styled" as much as their mothers. Very early in life Selina and Mary were taken to a hairdresser who has enough sense to give serious attention to his customers of the future.

He took one look at Selina and saw that she wasn't going to bother much. He tailored her head so that, however much she tossed it, none of her hair fell into her eyes.

He showed her—clever fellow—what hair looks like under a microscope, and sold her mother a good hairbrush.

A huge success

SELINA is, consequently, making her first attempts to titivate. She has experimented with plaits.

They suited her but were abandoned in favour of a brushed out. She wears Alice bands demure middle parting, longish of black velvet and, being a band-side pieces drawn to the back of the head and made into a single morning till bedtime.

For school her hair has to be "tied back," but her mother refuses to plait out the waves. A bow at the top of her head, or two bows, one on each side of her head, keeps her tidy enough to please her mother.

She goes to school with a neat, limpet-like slide at the end of her short pigtail; but for "best" she wears inch-wide ribbon tied in a neat, flat bow.

Clean brush

ALL the children possess two brushes and start each day—when they remember—with a clean one. Five minutes twice a day is my sister's allowance of brushing for each head. I must say she makes hair shine like new straw.

Because Mary's hair didn't grow mousy and her face is really thin, becomingly on her forehead, she had

Mothers In Blazing Liner

HE HAD PLAN TO END WAR

Dr. Rex Henshaw, a well-known chemist, and his wife were killed recently when they fell from the 10th floor of a New York apartment building.

Dr. Henshaw was experimenting with a chemical to "humanise" war by causing temporary paralysis to the soldiers.

He believed that one point of his chemical preparation loaded into a shell would render about a million men unconscious for several hours.

Police believe that one of the couple fell or jumped, and the other fell in attempting to save the first.

Told "T.N.T. On Board" BABIES RESCUED

Portland.

Ten passengers of the British liner Italian Prince (3,478 tons) landed at Portland recently and told how, as the ship was ablaze in the Atlantic, they heard that she was loaded with high explosive T.N.T.

One of the passengers said: "We expected to be blown to smithereens at any minute. Soon after we had taken to the boats the Italian Prince was ablaze from end to end. No one knows what has happened to her."

The passengers told too how the six women on board scrambled up a 30-ft. rope ladder on to the Atlantide, Italian cargo vessel (6,300 tons), which picked them up after they had been tossed for an hour in a lifeboat.

With them were two babies.

"Yard" Spy Hunt Ends In Laughter

The discovery of a number of blueprints in a dustbin gave Scotland Yard a lot of trouble recently.

For blueprints suggested "secret plans," and that, in turn, suggested spies, and so the dustbin, with usual household contents, plus the blueprints, was taken to the Yard.

Experts spent hours poring over the plans—and then announced they were those of an obsolete type of wireless set.

Tiger Halts Rock Blasting Operations

Kuala Kangsar.

While supervising rock blasting operations at the 23rd mile on the main road between Salak North and Sungai Siput recently, Mr. K. S. R. Lingham, F.W.D. Contractor, and Mr. A. S. Thambiah, Head Overseer, Sungai Siput, had a thrilling experience when they were suddenly confronted by a full grown tiger which emerged from a thicket nearby.

With great presence of mind, Mr. Lingham flashed his torch on the animal. The tiger, however, instead of being scared away started to come closer to him. Mr. Lingham then hurried to his car and sounded the horn and this, combined with the shouts of the coolies, must have scared the tiger, which disappeared into the thicket whence it originally came.

150,000 To 1 On A Blood Test

Odds against an error in deciding paternity by a blood test were 150,000 to one, said Dr. John Thomas, the pathologist, giving evidence at Middlesex Sessions.

Marie Louise Morrison, 26, unmarried, of Nelson-road, Hornsey, N., appealed against the dismissal of an application for a paternity order at Highgate.

TEST SUPPORTS MAN'S DENIAL

Mr. Frank Milton, her counsel, said that a decision on the infallibility of the blood test had not been given, and declared: "And the sooner its value is thrashed out by a superior court the better."

Sidney Baron, a manager, of Dunmore-road, Stamford Hill, N., denied that he was the father of Miss Morrison's child.

POSSIBILITY OF ERROR

Mr. Milton asked for an adjournment so that a test might be made by another doctor on behalf of Miss Morrison, but the chairman ordered the hearing to proceed.

Dr. Thomas said that was almost impossible for Baron to be the father of the child, but he agreed that even with experience and care false results might unwittingly be obtained as a result of an error in getting the groups right.

SHE said

"If you were alone: why were there so many cigarette ends in your room?"

Big Sewage Scheme Mooted For Kowloon Areas

The subject of an entirely new sewage disposal system for Kowloon, running into millions of dollars, was mentioned at yesterday's meeting of the Urban Council, following remarks by Dr. Basto on the inadequacy of the present system.

Following a motion by the Chairman, Mr. R. R. Todd, recommending to Government the erection of a public toilet and urinal adjoining Lot No. 2041, Nam Kok Road, Dr. Basto made a complaint. He said:

"I note from the Chairman's minutes that only 10 per cent of the houses in the newly built-up areas in Kowloon City are supplied with flush closets. This means that 90 per cent of newly-built houses in this area will have to resort to the most unhygienic and disgusting method of having to allow the night-soil to accumulate in the premises for several days, until it is subsequently removed and sold as manure for fattening vegetables for human consumption."

"We have had recently one of the worst cholera epidemics in the history of this Colony, and the taxpayer has been called upon to pay out large sums of money in order to meet the expenses entailed through this scourge, and one would have thought that an effort would have been made to prevent the occurrence of such epidemics, or at least to minimise them, by insisting on the provision of flush-closets in newly-built houses—not in every house. Instead of which we see that 90 per cent of newly-built houses have been permitted or even perhaps forced to adopt a most insanitary and antiquated method for the disposal of human excrement."

"This brings me to an old subject which has been brought up a good many times before this Council. I refer to the action on the part of Government in refusing permission for the installation of flush-closets in a very large area of the urban district in Kowloon, comprising Mong Kok, Yau Ma Tei and Homantin. This very congested area harbours a population of about 110,000 souls, and notwithstanding this, Government cannot see its way to providing the necessary drainage system to enable landlords to install water-closets in their houses."

"Until this modern method of sanitation is adopted throughout the urban areas, we cannot expect to be freed of recurrent epidemics of cholera, typhoid, and dysentery."

Experts Differ

The Chairman: "I think I can satisfy you that the nightsoil you refer to is not used for gardening purposes. There is a special squad of coolies which does nothing else but destroy sumps of human excrement and various devices that people have to hide their nightsoil."

"As regards the installation of flush closets in houses in the Homantin area, I do not think we can insist on that, though I speak subject to correction by Mr. Henderson. There is the question of the water supply and the sewerage system with which we cannot deal. What you mention about Homantin has caused a great deal of controversy among the experts. One line of thought is that if the sewage goes to the Yau Ma Tei harbour refuge it would pollute the water unduly, while another body thinks that it would make the neighbourhood unbearable. The alternative to running the sewage into the Yau Ma Tei harbour refuge would be to take it to Kowloon Bay."

Hon. Mr. Henderson: "The difficulty about dealing with Homantin at the moment is that it is in the middle of the sewerage system of Kowloon, and it is too low to discharge into any place but the harbour unless we re-excavate the whole area and lift it up to take it away in the Kowloon sewers. That is part of a scheme running into millions of dollars and it has not been settled. The operation would be a very expensive one, and the middle part, being an intersecting sewer, would be especially costly."

The Chairman: "The matter is complicated by a further scheme to fill in the Yau Ma Tei harbour refuge and make another refuge at Sham Shu Po."

The motion by the Chairman was seconded by Dr. Selwyn-Clarke, and passed.

THERE CAN BE VICTORY IN DISASTER

The Chinese people will need all the moral support their friends can give to withstand the second disaster that has overtaken their country in less than a week, for morale and confidence necessarily must be badly shaken by the successive losses of Canton and Hankow, in peace-time the two largest cities in the country except Shanghai.

Chinese newspapers are probably much better adapted than British journals to telling the masses that the withdrawal from the Wuhan area was inevitable; that to fight in Hankow would have hurt China much more than Japan; that Chinese leaders, including Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, predicted early this year that the Japanese entry would be effected before July. That it is the tenth and not the seventh month of the year in which the Japanese can claim that they have reached their objective seems no cause for despondency on the part of the Chinese. They have made a gallant and impossible stand for the three cities when it would have been easy, and probably not much less fruitful, to draw the Japanese further into the hinterland. The story of Tehan is one that should be immortalised by China's historians of the future, for to the gallant defenders of this obscure and previously unknown village goes the honour of immobilising practically the entire might of Japan for three months.

China, reeling under two successive blows, temporarily is like a punch-drunk boxer. But with the withdrawal from Hankow and the taking up of new lines in more favourable terrain, she has gained a breathing spell for the next round. For Japan there is no such breathing spell. Entry into a city, even a city of the size and richness of Canton and Hankow (the riches of both cities, incidentally, have disappeared in the hour of the invaders' victory) does not end or relax the terrific strain under which she is conducting this war of aggression.

China, it should be reiterated,

TO-DAY a new generation of Etonians will hear about the Iron Duke.

Perhaps in these troubled times it is good that they should hear tell of a strong Irishman. The Duke of Wellington did Eton College great injury when, in a fit of generosity, he said, "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton."

Few believed this fantastic statement, few would have remembered it to this day if it were not the custom for every young Etonian to be told by the school authorities of the duke's foolish remark.

Since this evil day Etonians have regarded themselves as the mainstay of the Army officer class, and the public have regarded Etonians with both distrust and suspicion.

THE public are biased at once by the clothes that tail coat for boys from the age of twelve upwards is ridiculous.

"Is that school trying to educate the sons of the rich into effeminate fops?" That's what is said.

A century ago that would be a true statement. Eton was trying to educate its scholars into being little gentlemen and to wearing the same clothes as daddy.

Now, however, there is a better reason for keeping the Etonian uniform.

The headmaster of Eton, if he were questioned as to why he did not dress Etonians in clothes suitable to boys young in years, would probably answer: "Convicts are dressed in loud-striped overalls so that they can easily be seen when they escape. We can easily follow the top hat of an Etonian if he breaks bounds."

So rather pity the Etonian. His top hat and tail coat worry him more than you.

It is not easy to get your non dress in a top hat and tail coat. It is expensive, too. To send a boy to Eton it is necessary to inscribe is more able to withstand the attacks of Japan's mechanised units and aeroplanes than Japan is able to withstand the attacks on her financial and economic structure. China's reverses are blazoned on the front pages of the world's newspapers; Japan's reverses, because of their insidiousness and because they are really known only to the financial leaders of the country, are seldom or never mentioned. Nevertheless, of the two, they are probably the greater. It becomes a question of which will crack up first under the strain.

If China's morale remains firm; if the Chinese people continue to give unwavering support to the leaders who have led them for fifteen months, no nation on earth can conquer this great country which is our neighbour.

HOW DO YOU PRAY?

MANY of us have started to pray again for the first time, perhaps since we were children. And we don't find it easy. We flop down on our knees and say, "O God, please let there be peace in the world, and if there must be war, don't let them kill me and my family."

A petition like that is not really a prayer, but a wish, and when you come to think of it, rather a selfish one. Why should you in particular be exempt from danger?

Those who get up from their knees after a prayer like that probably feel, "Well, now I've asked God to do what I want. If He doesn't do it I shall feel that He doesn't exist and that it is no good praying."

This frame of mind leaves such people very much where they were before they started praying, in a state of despairing half-belief. It is reducing God to the level of a lucky mascot.

All the same, half the battle is won by the willingness of people to trust something more than just clever wits and material strength. The most encouraging signs recently have been those of the public distaste for war. The question is: When you pray to God, what ought you to pray about?

The first thing for you to do is to acknowledge the existence of Evil. This should not be difficult. The dogs of war have rather barked their way into prominence recently.

The next thing is to remember that it is not for you to condemn any human being as wholly evil. You are not to pray for the destruction of those of whom you disapprove. God will destroy them, in the end, if they ought to be destroyed. God always triumphs over evil, because He is all-powerful and evil is only negative.

BUT God has more time to work His will than our short lives. Even Communists or dictators or Conservatives or whoever they may be whom you personally dislike must one day die.

But you can work against the will of God and assist evil and war by wishing destruction of people rather than of things. So when you pray, pray for justice, right and grace.

JUSTICE for all in the decisions which are being made to-day, not the sort of justice that was made at Versailles, but divine justice.

Right triumph over wrong. Grace working in the hearts of all men, to bring about the triumph of good over evil.

And here you can dedicate yourself to God, to let Him use you as He wills. In this way, even if the prayers of the faithful cannot avert a war, you will be submitting yourself to the will of God and He will tell you what to do.

And if you want words in which to express all this and more, you will find them in the Lord's Prayer.

Ex-pupil reports on his school

his name on the school roll at birth. Then the parent must name which house he desires his son to go to. Then, twelve years after the birth of the child, an entrance examination has to be taken.

Before the examination the parents must decide whether they wish their son to attempt a scholarship or to be an Oppidan.

THERE are many advantages if your son is clever enough to take a scholarship. His fees will be halved. Instead of his education costing £300 per annum it will cost £150.

If a boy passes the scholarship he has the right to put "K.S." after his name; that means "King's Scholar." He will then live in "college" among seventy other scholars.

If your son is not so bright as that you decide that he should become an Oppidan. He will then take a simpler exam, and if he passes will go to one of the twenty-eight houses. Each house has about forty boys in it.

However, a boy who goes to a house always looks down on the scholar. He will call the scholar by the derogatory name of Tug.

There are twelve hundred boys at Eton. But it would be an error to think that they are pampered with luxury and care. An Eton boy has less luxury than the ordinary boy who attends a council school. In winter the Etonian has first of all to resist the cold, damp Thames Valley climate.

At 7.25 a.m., weather wet or fine, the young Etonian will attend early school. To get to his classroom he may have to walk a mile. And he will not be given breakfast until 8.30.

After his breakfast you would think that he would be able to sit in a warm room in his house, especially in winter. No, this comfort is denied to him because none of the Eton houses has central heating.

Each student has his own bed-sitting-room. There is a fireplace in every room. But no boy is allowed to light a fire in his room before twelve noon. For the whole day an Etonian is given one small scuttle of coal.

Not every day, however, but four times a week only. When I was at Eton I endured cold for three days in the week. However, I looked forward to the limited amount of coal I was given by my housemaster for the remainder of the week.

Eton refuses to install central heating in the houses, although it has done so in the schoolrooms. The housemaster must not be blamed for giving the forty students in his house a limited amount of coal.

For the living of a housemaster depends upon the money he can amass out of his house. Each housemaster receives £80 per year per boy.

He has the boys in his house for eight months per year. Out of this figure he has to pay rent for his house, feed the boys, provide servants and heat and maintain the house.

AN Etonian, when he first goes to Eton, has to fag. The first six to ten boys will be able to order the new arrivals to run errands for them. A young boy will have to be a fag from one to two years, according to how well he passed his original entrance examination.

Discipline in the house is maintained by the first five or six senior persons of the house. If a boy misbehaves the captain of the house has a right to beat him.

The permission of the housemaster, or tutor as he is called at Eton, is as a rule asked before the culprit is punished. A boy can only be punished for house offences by the captain of the house.

If a boy does badly at his work he comes before the headmaster. The form master will complain to the headmaster that Mr. So-and-So is idle and should be flogged.

The headmaster then sends for the boy, and puts him on a white ticket. He is on a white ticket for ten days.

At the end of that time he must obtain the signatures of all his form masters on the ticket to say that his work has improved. If one of his form masters should fail to sign, the boy is summoned to the headmaster and is flogged with a birch.

Flogging at Eton is carried out with pomp and ceremony. The boy to be flogged is made to kneel on a block with his trousers down, a gentleman called a fusser then sits on the unfortunate's head, and one of the senior boys hands the birch to the headmaster. And the flogging marches on.

It is considered a great disgrace to be flogged by the headmaster. When I was at Eton the heavy hand of Dr. Alington, now Dean of Durham, was on this much feared. I never experienced the chastisement of the Dean of Durham.

HOWEVER, I once came near to it. I was before him for some offence to which I pleaded ignorance.

Said Dr. Alington: "You are either a fool or a knave. If I consider you to be a knave I shall flog you."

I quickly explained to Dr. Alington that I was a fool. To my intense relief he agreed that I was a fool.

Eton provides a good education. When a boy first goes there he has to work about ten hours a day. When he gets older the volume of work is reduced, no doubt to accustom many to the life which they will live after they have left "dear mother Eton."

Etonians leave the school from the ages of seventeen to nineteen. Many Etonians go to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and later the Army. Others go to the universities, and others enter business.

When an Etonian leaves the headmaster bids him farewell and hands him a copy of Gray's "Elegy." The gift of this book is very important to an Etonian, for it shows that he left Eton in honourable circumstances and was not dismissed.

THE name of the departed Etonian will be carved on the panels of Upper School where Pitt once studied. Pitt started this custom, for he carved his name on one of the shutters of Upper School. Etonians do this because they can then say, "I went to the same school as William Pitt."

What happens to Etonians? Some go to jail, some to the House of Commons as Tories, some become good ministers, some become night club proprietors, some generals, some stockbrokers, and others do nothing but live in the memory that they were once Etonians, and hold high the flag of black and blue.

MARRIAGE THEORY IS WRECKED ON LONE ISLE

Two hundred healthy descendants of the Bounty mutineers, living on lonely Pitcairn Island, have badly shaken the theory that inter-marriage in a community breeds degeneracy.

Mr. J. S. Neill, who, with a medical colleague, Dr. Duncan Cook, spent thirty-nine days on the island last year, says in a report issued recently that the theory has no sound basis if the original stock is sound.

He says the physique of the islanders is magnificent, their physical courage and strength remarkable. The island is well kept—evidence of "solid work."

For eighty years the island's medical history records an average of only one death a year.

Darker side of the picture is that the discipline of the family has degenerated. Children seem to do as they like. The art of cooking has sunk to a low standard.

To save the people's culture, says Mr. Neill, better education must be provided for the children.

The only amusement seems to be the playing of harmoniums and gramophones, and Mr. Neill suggests the installation of a wireless set for communal listening.

But to harassed taxpayers one feature of the mutineers' island will appear to outweigh many of its disadvantages.

At present the only tax paid is a gun licence fee of sixpence a year.

This is used to buy stationery for the chief magistrate.

STORK SAVED HIM

The wife of a young lorry driver, Joseph Callard, of Ashley-road, Upper Parkstone, Dorset, was expecting a happy event. In his hurry to get home Callard was gonged on the main London-to-Bournemouth road, travelling at 40 to 42 miles an hour.

At Romsey Borough Police Court, Hampshire, recently Callard wrote pleading guilty and his employer, who appeared on his behalf, explained that on the day of the offence Callard's wife was expecting a baby.

"I hope the baby arrived all right," commented Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon (the chairman), who announced that the summons would be dismissed.

Strong Condemnation

The National Federation of Christian Workers among Poor Children held their autumn rally and conference in Manchester. They visited the Central Library and listened to an address by Mr. C. Nowell, Chief Librarian of Manchester. After tea at Wood Street Mission Hall, they conferred under the chairmanship of Councillor T. R. Ackroyd, and listened to Mr. Arthur Black, of London. Many of the delegates attended divine service at the Albert Hall, to which they were welcomed by the Rev. F. J. Gould. In the afternoon Dr. E. Vipont Brown addressed the conference on "The Danger of Alcohol."

Dr. Brown attacked the use of alcohol from the point of view of a medical man, and said that it had been shown by experiment that alcohol deteriorated the nerve-centres. The first effect of alcohol was to paralyse the highest nerve centres. Alcohol was one of the predisposing causes of consumption; it affected a man's judgment, destroyed his moral sense, and weakened his willpower and sense of honour. It was one of the causes of insanity and of melancholia.

It had been said that alcohol was a blessing in disguise because it carried off those who were least fitted to survive, but it effected none of the keenest sensibilities and sometimes the cleverest and the best.

Dr. Brown went on to discuss the effect of alcohol when taken in small quantities, and denied the popular theory that alcohol effectively warmed the body.

A hundred years ago, he said, there was a case of a member of the Society of Friends who had applied for insurance and been quoted a higher premium because he was an abstainer from alcohol. He was told that a young man who neglected the gifts of God was not expected to live long. Nowadays many insurance companies quoted a higher premium for non-abstainers, but their action did not arise from any fanatical temperance opinions, but from hard business sense.

One questioner asked Dr. Brown whether alcohol should be used as a palliative in cases where certain workers were liable to suffer from lung troubles caused by dust, and he said that far from being a palliative, alcohol encouraged tuberculosis.

Mr. Nowell told the delegates when he conducted them round the Central Library, that although teaching a child to read and write was extremely important, what all teachers must realise was that it was equally important to educate the child in taste, and to encourage him or her to read the right books.

Nurse For Audience

Every time the big scene is approached in Emile Zola's melodrama, "Thou Shalt Not," at the Playhouse Theatre, London a nurse quickly slips into the auditorium, ready to deal with fainting women.

A girl sitting in the stalls screamed out last night, "Stop! Stop! Stop!" and collapsed. An old man at the back rose in his seat, exclaimed "I can't stand it," and stumbled out.

The scene is that in which Nancy Price, an old woman, discovers that a young married couple playing at her house are the murderers of her son, and a member of the theatre staff said.

"We usually anticipate some kind of a disturbance in the action of the play has not suffered interference, but as a precaution members of the staff are stationed here and there to keep their eyes open for any faints."

WANTED MAN DEAD IN CHURCH PORCH

Wanted by the police on an information relating to £800, Frank Charles Jeffery, hotel valuer (60), of Walton Road, Thorpe Bay, was found dead recently in the porch of a Southend church.

He had been missing since September 1. Death is believed to have been due to poisoning.

Jeffery, a native of Torquay, founded the West Country Association in Southend and was its president for many years.

UNDERGRADUATE OPINION ON NEED FOR UNIVERSITY

Singapore Students Who Come To Hongkong A CULTURAL CENTRE FOR MALAYA

The possible formation of a Malayan University as a result of the investigations which began recently of the McLean Commission is the subject of keen discussion in both the colleges in Singapore.

Undergraduates, especially freshmen, have for weeks past been speculating on their chances of obtaining degrees on leaving college, instead of the present diplomas.

Urging the creation of a Singapore University, an undergraduate at Raffles College pointed out that the college diploma is recognised only in Malaya, and thus the chances of holders finding appointment outside this country are negligible.

"The development of the intellectual classes," he continued, "especially the Asiatic and European element, in proportion to the population of this country, is below the average compared with other countries of equal, if not less, economic development, as for instance Ceylon."

"What is needed is a University second to none, which will not only be a means of preserving the cultural heritage of Malaya, but also adequately meet the growing needs of higher education in a heterogeneous and cosmopolitan population."

He observed that the establishment of a university here will give Malayan youth not merely education of a university standard, but also by virtue of a degree, greater recognition of their worth than at present.

GOVERNMENT POLICY The decisions of the Government as announced by Sir Shenton Thomas at the Raffles College reunion dinner in November last year, in regard to the awarding of Queen's Scholarships from 1941 from Raffles College, the appointment of a principal for the College, and the decision of the Federated Malay States to send Malay officers for the administrative service on a special college course and above all the coming arrival of the Education Commission augured well for the future.

"Higher education in Malaya can never be complete without a University," another student said.

"The controversy over the formation of a University was carried out with much enthusiasm in the local Press some time past, that the arrival of the Commission will again draw the attention of the Malayan public to this need."

"Raffles College affords a University training, yet students are not recognised as possessing University status: our graduates have undergone university courses of equal standard with corresponding courses in British universities, yet they are not recognised as university-trained men and women."

"If they desire to further their studies in British universities, they are not even exempted from the first year course of the particular branches of study which they have carried to degree standard at Raffles College.

MORE STUDENTS

The number of students at the College is steadily increasing. This year Raffles College admitted about 100 freshmen.

Asked what students thought of the proposal that instead of forming a University, Raffles College men should be prepared for London University degrees, one reply was that even if the college curriculum is planned to enable a student to sit for London external examinations, this was not conducive to the evolution of a culture that would harmonise with the natural surroundings and historical background of this country.

It would, in effect, reproduce conditions in Ceylon, and Raffles College will be to Malaya what University College is to Ceylon—a place for turning out London external degree passers.

Those who urge the establishment of a Malayan University, of which the two colleges would be the nucleus draw attention to a passage which appears as a condition in one of the endowment scholarships:

"If for any reason a Singapore University shall not have been founded on or before the first day of January 1948 then in that case the trustees shall stand possessed of the trust fund."

COLONIAL PRINCIPLE

One student observed that since the policy of British administration in the colonies, as outlined by Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, is "to teach the peoples of the Colonies to stand a little more securely on their own feet," we could better meet this purpose than the establishment of a Malayan University.

Those opposed to the formation of a University in Singapore base their arguments on three main grounds.

The first objection is the insufficient number of students. Secondly, by virtue of its being essentially a commercial city, Singapore would reap little benefit from the forma-

BOY CLOSED THE SCHOOL

Two boys, aged 10 and 11, who had a grudge against their teacher, took their revenge by wrecking the school so badly that it had to be closed for a day.

Windows and furniture were smashed with a hammer and paint squeezed all over a room.

The damage cost £30 to repair.

"We pay back our debts," read a note they left behind.

At Pontefract (Yorks) juvenile court recently the boys were accused of breaking and entering the school at Hensworth, committing malicious damage and stealing money.

One boy's parents attributed the action to "the pictures."

The Bench decided to suspend judgment for six months for a report on the boys' home conditions.

tion of a university, and lastly that it would involve a considerable expenditure to maintain such an institution.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED

To these objections all students are ready with replies.

The first argument, that the number of students is not sufficiently large to justify the formation of a university, is no longer tenable, it is pointed out.

The College of Medicine, for example, has been rejecting a large number of applications for the last few years.

The danger of producing excess of clerical workers is the argument put forward against the second objection.

The formation of a Malayan University will certainly produce the desired effect—to arrest the exodus of Malayan students to universities abroad, and especially Hongkong.

HONGKONG DEGREES

The cost of higher education in both Hongkong and Singapore is about the same, but whereas the Hongkong University graduate obtains a degree, his counterpart gets only a diploma.

It has been estimated that it costs nearly as much to maintain Raffles College as it is run at present, as it would to incorporate it as a Malayan University.

It has been suggested that the various governments of Malaya should set aside funds to bring a University into being.

An interesting comparison is made with Java, where a similar financial difficulty has been partly overcome.

The Dutch believe that a university depends not on the external and impressive structure of the college buildings, but in the thoroughness given.

The three colleges in Java which constitute a University can confer a Master's degree in Medicine, Engineering or Law—and are recognised as such in Holland.

Some graduates of Raffles College are wondering what, in the event of the formation of a Malayan University, will be the standing of the graduates who have obtained diplomas before the establishment of the university?

SHANGHAI INTERPORT BOWLERS DESERVE SUCCESS

TEAM SPIRIT CARRIES VISITORS THROUGH

(By "Abe")

To say that the form revealed by the Hongkong Interport bowls rinks in the recent matches against Shanghai was disappointing is but to express mildly the feelings of those who had had such great faith in the players selected to do duty for the Colony.

Shanghai won the 1938 series without any undue trouble, annexing the second and third Interports after the first had been adjudged to the. The results of each match were:—First Interport, 20-20; Second Interport, Shanghai won by 30-10; and Third Interport, Shanghai won by 20-17.

Except, to a certain extent, for the rink which opposed Shanghai in the first match at Kowloon Docks, neither rink in the second or third did themselves justice.

Of the four men in the opening game, only A. R. Dallah and, in a lesser degree, B. W. Bradbury distinguished themselves. A. E. Coates, at No. 1, failed to reach his usual high standard, while J. McKelvie was absolutely off colour and did little right.

ONLY ONE SHINES

In the second game, only H. A. Alves accomplished anything of note. The other three members of the rink, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher and J. Hollidge (skip) were very poor. It is rather late in the day to criticise the positioning of the players, but it does appear significant, though, that the only man of the four who did well, H. A. Alves, was the one who had had Interport experience.

With three men playing on their own green in the Hongkong rink, it was expected—and rightly so—that the local men would have the advantage in the third game on the Club de Recreio green. But once again those who were playing on the green they knew well proved the greatest disappointment. It was left to U. M. Omar, the skip, to play the best game of the four.

It will thus be seen that of the six new caps, A. R. Dallah, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher, J. Hollidge, F. X. M. da Silva and J. A. da Luz, only Dallah can be said to have justified his inclusion.

Let it be understood, however, that I do not mean to add that there was, in my opinion, little wrong with the actual selections of the players; it was only in the play that the local representatives let their selectors down.

NOT BETTER PLAYERS

Even now, after all three Interport matches have already been decided, I cannot understand why Shanghai won so easily. I have followed the visitors around in their matches with the various clubs, and I find it difficult to believe that they are so much better than our three rinks. Admittedly in Hugh Wallace, they have a skip who would be difficult to beat in any company, he revealed sufficiently in the Interport matches to prove himself a player of the highest calibre. Also in A. M. Gutierrez, the visitors have a very reliable man indeed in any position.

However, the form shown by the others was nothing out of the ordinary. For instance, W. J. MacDermott, of whom so much was expected, was very disappointing from the Shanghai point of view; and the same remark might be applied to J. M. C. Lopes, J. W. Brierley and A. M. Gerrard did not take part in the Interport matches.

While in actual play they might not have been so much better than the Hongkong men, in team spirit, however, they were immeasurably superior. As Hugh Wallace remarked at the Interport dinner, "every man pulled his weight." When one failed, another would succeed; and therein lay the secret of their success.

FAST GREENS

A contributory cause was also the speed of the green. Accustomed as they are to heavier greens, the Hongkong men found the fast greens at Kowloon Docks, Civil Service and Recreio too much for them. On the other hand, the Shanghai men, used to fast greens, found local conditions at this time of the year ideal for them.

Congratulations, Shanghai! The visitors have proved themselves popular in every club in the Colony. They leave by the Wing-sang on Thursday evening. Hongkong will be looking forward to seeing them here again shortly!

I do not wish to conclude this article on a currying note, but I do feel that the decision made in the first Interport in calling it a draw was an inexplicable one. And that was why I was so pleased when Shanghai won the Third Interport; as holders of the Prentice Cup, the visitors were entitled to retain the trophy even if the series had ended in a tie of one game each, but by winning the third match, Shanghai's victory was clear-cut.

With the latest success, Shanghai has lengthened its margin of victories over Hongkong in the series, having won 12 to Hongkong's eight.

Prospects Of Triangular Rugger Interport Are Extremely Rosy

Although Shanghai has not definitely undertaken to send a team to Hongkong, there is every prospect of a triangular rugby Interport between Shanghai, Malaya and Hongkong taking place in the Colony during February, 1939.

Malaya has confirmed its decision to send a team here, and the latest information from Shanghai is to the effect that the northerners will make every effort to raise a strong representative side for the Interport with Hongkong. The possibility of a triangular Interport is expected to exert a strong influence on negotiations.

According to the Shanghai Times, the visit to Hongkong by a Shanghai team will be made over the Chinese New Year holidays. Whether this date will coincide with the time of arrival of the Malayan team is not yet known in Shanghai, but it remains for Colony officials to suggest a date agreeable to both Malaya and Shanghai.

The Shanghai Rugby Union Football Club is displaying great interest over the reported plans for a triangular Interport.

Big Controversy In United States Over Foot-Fault Rules

The foot-faulting of A. K. Quist at the critical stage of the first set of his Davis Cup single against D. Budge at Germantown seems still to be the subject of much contention and criticism in the United States, writes F. R. Burrow in the Observer.

At the time of the incident the standards were raised to a high level, sympathy with the Australian, who was repeatedly foot-faulted both on his first and second service. This upset both the players, and a fine match was spoiled.

But it must be said, and with the utmost emphasis, that it was not spoilt by the foot-fault judge, but by the player who repeatedly broke Rule 7. It was complained that Quist's infraction of the rule was "only a technical infraction," and asked why he had not been foot-faulted earlier in the match, but only when the crisis of the set arrived.

Now there is no such thing as a "technical" infraction of a rule. Either the server is serving fairly, or he is serving unfairly. If he is serving unfairly he ought to be penalised and must be penalised by a linesman or foot-fault judge (if there is one) who knows his duty.

APT TO FORGET

As to only putting the law in motion at the moment of crisis, it is quite possible (though, to those who have watched Quist play, improbable) that his service had been fair up to the point at which he began to be penalised.

It is just at these critical moments that even an ordinary fair server is apt to forget his normal strictness in his anxiety to get to the net; and, since these critical moments are just as critical for his opponent as for himself, it is all the more necessary that he should be prevented from gaining an unfair advantage—even if it is unintentionally unfair—over him.

Wimbledon habits will not have forgotten a similar incident when J. H. Crawford was playing F. J. Perry, in 1934, in the final of the championship. Crawford, normally a scrupulously fair server, was making his last stand, coming in on every-thing and risking all on a net attack.

At match-point to Perry, Crawford served and followed in, only to be foot-faulted for infringing the rule by swinging over in his haste to get to the net. He served his second service into the net! And the match was over.

VERY NECESSARY

That foot-fault judge was bitterly

attacked by a great many people who ought to have known better; but as he very pertinently inquired: "Is a foot-fault not a foot-fault when it is at match-point?" To which no reply is possible. It was unfortunate; but the fault was the player's, not the linesman's.

The rule is a necessary rule; without it, players might serve from any part of the court they liked. And, so long as it is a rule, it should be enforced, not only in high places, but in the ordinary run of tournament play. Budge never foot-faulted; Perry was a scrupulously fair server. If men like these can be "world-champions" while obeying the rules, lesser fry ought to be proud to follow their example.

One of the troubles is that a great many players break the rule without realising that they do so; they have not the slightest intention of being unfair to their opponents. But until some umpire or umpire is courageous enough to pull them up, it is not surprising that they go on breaking the rule nearly every time they serve.

SPECTACLES AND FOOTBALL

If footballers wear spectacles they ought to have unbreakable lenses. So the Football Association has decided. The question was raised at the monthly meeting of the Lancashire Football Association Council. Bury Amateur League wrote that two players wear glasses. The League feared they might injure themselves or other players and therefore asked for a ruling.

An F.A. official stated that there was nothing in the rules to prevent a bespectacled player taking part in a match, but the Association recommended that they should use unbreakable lenses. There are no bespectacled players in first-class football to-day. "Old boys" among the fans, however, will recall Mitchell, the Manchester City goalkeeper of 10 or 12 years ago, who wore his glasses while playing.

BRITISH GOLFERS IN LINE WITH THOSE OF AMERICA & CANADA

(By Geoffrey Simpson)

London, Sept. 29.

We are getting on in golf . . . the R. & A., as we guessed, have made the 14-club limit official. From the Spring it will be against the law and horribly un sporting to use more than 14 clubs, or even carry a bag holding more than that number.

It brings British golfers into line with those of the United States and Canada, who have already made it a rule, but do we care very much?

Yes, we do. It means that the rusty iron we carried around for no reason at all except that it was an old favourite and looked well in the bag has got to go because at present we are over the limit.

Golfers are queer folk. So many like to carry a bag full of clubs, half of which they do not use.

In the women's championship at Aldeburgh this week, Pam Barton has played the grandest golf with a bag of 10 clubs (including one very old iron), eight of which she never touched.

Now Miss Barton must cast two aside, because she is out of order in carrying 10. But I doubt whether she has ever played with 14 clubs during a round in her life. And that is true of almost every golfer who carries a large bag.

AVERAGE BAG—12

An interesting piece of information is that a check on the number of clubs employed nowadays has been made at Aldeburgh this week.

A representative of a manufacturing firm has been going round counting the number of clubs the women golfers have taken on to the course, and his statistics show that the average bag is 12—three woods and nine irons.

The same figure is probably true of male golfers, so that the restriction is not going to make golf more difficult.

In fact, the chief reaction of golfers to the new rule will be that it is superfluous.

At the same time it is advisable to remember that the rule exists, for the penalty, if caught in the dread act of carrying one club too many, is disqualification.

ANOTHER BALL?

What is more likely to get golfers by the ears is the announcement that the R. & A. believe the time is opportune for a reduction of flight in the golf ball. The question is to be considered by the committee.

In this they will be opposed. Another eccentricity of the golfer is that he likes to be flattered, and when he gets a ball he can drive five yards farther than any other he has used, he is as pleased as an angel who has landed a catch he can talk about.

The golf ball has been experimented with for years, but the general opinion is that the present ball cannot be improved upon.

I have it on the authority of a big manufacturer that another 40 to 50 yards "carry" could be added to the golf ball. "At the same time, the staff of scientists we employ could as easily turn out a ball that would travel 50 yards less," he said.

"But whether we put extra distance on or took it off, the game would be spoiled. I do not see any cause for readjustment."

In my opinion, if the flight of the ball is reduced it will interfere seriously with the game of the ordinary player. And it is the ordinary golfer who matters most, though there is a tendency in high places to forget this and to think only of the front-rankers who get their names in the papers.

MAN WHO MATTERS

In all matters such as this it is the majority for whom the authorities should legislate.

It is the Saturday afternoon player in cricket, the small club man in lawn tennis, and the 16-handicap enthusiast in golf who make the wheels of sport go round.

How often are their interests forgotten!

Of course, it does not follow that the R. & A. will change the ball, even if they mean to talk about it. It is hopeful, at any rate, that the manufacturers have not been officially consulted . . . and not even the R. & A. can alter the ball without the help of the trade.

Craigengower
Has Had A Good Year
Annual Meeting
Held Yesterday

A satisfactory report was presented at the forty-fifth annual general meeting of the Craigengower Cricket Club, held yesterday. The financial position of the Club was declared to be good, but there was a big increase in members' accounts outstanding. The President, Mr. B. W. Bradbury, warned that unless there was a marked improvement in the cash position of the Club would be seriously affected.

Presenting the report and statement of accounts, Mr. Bradbury said:

The annual report and statement of accounts having been in your hands for the period prescribed by the rules of the Club, I will, with your permission, take them as read.

Before proceeding with the business of the meeting, I desire, on behalf of the Club, to express my sympathy with the relatives of the late Mr. W. D. Bradwood and Mr. E. H. Ingham, both of whom passed away during the year. As you are perhaps aware, Mr. Bradwood was the founder of the Craigengower Cricket Club, and by the foundation laid by him nearly half a century ago, the Club has grown to what it is to-day. As a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Bradwood and Mr. Ingham, I would ask you all to rise and remain standing for a brief moment.

Your Committee is very gratified in being able to present to you a Balance Sheet that must be considered very satisfactory. The profit for the year, viz. $320.80, shows an increase of $122.15 over last year. This, itself, represents a good showing, but when you take into consideration the very liberal allowance for depreciation, plus a sum of $300 transferred to a "Doubtful Debts Reserve Account," I think you will all agree that "satisfactory" is the correct word to use.

Bar earnings for the year, as you will see from the income and expenditure account, show a decrease of $228.88 over last year, which is probably due to more conservative spending on the part of our members, owing to uncertain conditions. Still, the result is very pleasing and Mr. Bosa and his colleagues of the Bar Sub-Committee are to be commended for a job well done.

Billiard receipts are down; in fact, the revenue from this source has not been in keeping with the large amount invested in putting the tables into the new building. In fact, in first class condition. There has been some discussion as regards the method of paying for these games. I trust that this can be cleared up satisfactorily and that, with the advent of various competitions, better returns will be obtained. I should like to take this opportunity of thanking the various members whose helpful advice made the work on the improvement of the tables very much simpler.

Subscriptions showed a healthy rise, this being due to the increase which came into effect last year. With an increase in new members, entrance fees are also up, and this is indeed pleasing. As you will observe, income under sundry receipts reached a very substantial figure, and members who have studied the accounts carefully will readily appreciate what this source of income means to the Club. Allow me to compliment the Social Sub-Committee for their splendid work. The Club is indeed grateful to them and to the various members who have assisted from time to time.

Expenses increase. Turning to expenses, there has been a rather heavy increase all round. Stationery has gone up, but the increase here can be accounted for by the large quantity of tombola tickets used. Rates and taxes have increased and this will go up even further next year, since our assessment rate has been raised considerably.

Cost of teas has risen by quite a margin, and, although this has been looked into very carefully, I do not anticipate any appreciable decrease, owing to the higher cost of necessities.

Bad debts written off is small, but I had hoped for an even smaller figure. However, I am still optimistic enough to hope that this item can be entirely eliminated in future.

Turning to the balance sheet, your particular attention is directed to the amount of depreciation on the building, gear, furniture and fixtures and crockery, amounting in all to $2,000.51. On the advice of our auditors, I greater allowance was made under this heading, and I am sure you will agree that this is a very wise move. Our Auditors also recommended transferring $500 to a Bad and Doubtful Debts Account, and as you will have noticed, this recommendation has been carried out.

Under assets, you will observe that bowls gear and tennis gear have been increased considerably, this being due to the purchase of a new lawn mower, which became an absolute necessity. New tennis nets and screens were also obtained during the year.

The heavy increase under furniture and fixtures is accounted for by the purchase of a large number of tables and chairs which were required for our whist and tombola functions.

Our cash position is quite sound, and, although we have less cash on hand than last year, this is offset by our having replaced the sum of $2,000.00 on fixed deposit.

Summing up, I wish to reiterate that the financial position of the Club is satisfactory, but there is one discordant note to sound, and that is the big increase in members' accounts outstanding. This is most disconcerting, and unless there is a marked improvement, it will not be long before our cash position will be seriously affected. I should like to take this opportunity of appealing to the members concerned to see that their accounts are paid more promptly in future. This is one way in which they can really help the Club, and I am confident that those of you who have been tardy in the past will now appreciate what this means to the Club and will not fail to co-operate more fully in this respect.

Sporting Activities. And now I come to the sporting activities of the Club during the past year. First mention must be made of our cricketers, who did extremely well. The senior team shared the championship with the I.R.C. after two undecided replays, from which we emerged with colours flying. The junior team finished runners-up and was unfortunately not winning the championship. I am particularly pleased with the success of the cricketers, for, in my report just a year ago, I predicted that the happy blending of youth and experience that we possessed would soon show results. That results came almost immediately with the Inter-City Cricket taken place this year, at least two of our young players must have gained recognition.

Turning to lawn bowls, I cannot say that we had a particularly successful season. The first and second season teams finished third in the League and the third team finally dropped into fifth place. Enthusiasm was well maintained, particularly among our younger players, who, when given an opportunity in the newly formed Valley Cup Competition at the end of the season, performed splendidly, and Craigengower's name was the first to be engraved on this trophy. I trust the keenness among our younger players will continue, and if it does, then we need not be pessimistic regarding the Club's future lawn bowls prospects.

Our tennis section has had a very enjoyable year, although, perhaps, not so successful, despite the fact that our "B" team were again in running for the championship right up to the last game. With so many players available, I am sure we will do better in this department. I should like to take this opportunity of congratulating Mr. George Chao on winning the Club singles championship as well as other events, and I shall look forward with pleasure to the time in the not distant future when more important trophies will be added to his list.

In conclusion, I desire to express my appreciation of the help given to me by the outgoing Committee. Despite minor criticisms, they have done good work. The splendid attendance at committee meetings is indicative of the interest they have taken in their work. Details of individual attendances will be given by the Hon. Secretary. The resignation from the Committee of Dr. Aizen during the year was regretted. His place was not filled as members next in rotation declined to serve.

To the members, I must express sincere thanks for their helpful co-operation throughout the season. The report and accounts were adopted unanimously on the proposal of Mr. Bradbury, seconded by Mr. W. Ward.

Election of Officers. Office-bearers elected for the year 1938-39 were: President, Mr. B. W. Bradbury; Vice-President, Mr. C. S. Rossetti; Secretary, Mr. W. K. Way; Treasurer, Mr. A. E. Coates; 1st XI Cricket Captain, Mr. E. Zimmerman; Vice-Captain, Mr. A. B. Hanson; 2nd XI Cricket Captain, Mr. B. R. Innes; Vice-Captain, Mr. J. L. Youngs; Committee, Messrs. R. Bosa, U. M. Omar, N. P. Karanjan, W. J. Howard, A. B. Hanson, J. W. Leonard, L. C. R. Souza and T. L. Locke.

There was considerable debate over the question of members' outstanding accounts. Mr. Way replied that the Club was very lenient in its treatment of members than many other Clubs in the Colony. The Club did not discriminate between its members, and he urged that accounts be promptly rendered, otherwise the finances would be seriously jeopardised.

Further discussion then ensued on the question of billiards. Mr. J. L. Landolt maintained that members, especially those who earned small salaries, should be allowed to sign chits for games, instead of paying cash.

Mr. Way replied that the system of paying cash had been instituted after much deliberation by the billiards sub-committee, who had called in competent members to assist in the question, and had come to the conclusion that such a system was the best.

He was supported by Mr. Rossetti, who said it was the considered opinion of the sub-committee that the Club should revert to the system of cash payment for a game of billiards. This decision had been made when interest in billiards was at its height. The system of signing chits contained certain drawbacks, among which was the failure of members to sign them after games. He felt that if members supported the sub-committee in its endeavours to assist the members rather than at its height, the Club would be in a better position to supply members with more efficient billiard-markers.

After further debate, Mr. Landolt proposed that members be allowed to sign chits for billiard games. Mr. E. Zimmerman proposed an amendment that the matter be left to the sub-committee to be formed, and this was carried.

The usual honorarium of $200 each to the Secretary and Treasurer, and $100 to the auditor was voted. Messrs. T. A. Martin and Company were re-elected auditors.

The meeting closed with votes of thanks to the President and outgoing Committee for their work during the past year.

Australian
Cricketers
Return HomeExpect Serious Opposition
From England

Melbourne, Oct. 25. The Australian cricketers returned to Australia to-day. Don Bradman declared he had fully recovered from his recent injury and would be able to play in the match between the Test team and the rest of Australia at Melbourne on December 9. Bradman also said that when the next test series was played in Australia, serious opposition might be expected from England as she had many promising young players. He added that he thought five days long enough for a result in one test match. —Reuter Bulletin.

TO THE CINEMAS

"Test Pilot" (King's Theatre, to-day).—A violently exciting as the screen of a speed plane in a power dive, the latest and probably the best of the air pictures evokes the atmosphere of terror and tension in which the test pilot lives. There are several spectacular air scenes. The playing throughout is splendid. Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore are all splendid in the cast.

"Bulldog Drummond in Africa" (Queen's Theatre, to-day).—Latest of the adventures of the famous Sapper character, set this time in an African jungle, with all its opportunities for cinematic thrills. John Howard again plays the title role, and Heather Angel is the romantic interest.

"In Old Mexico" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—William Boyd in the character of Hopalong Cassidy again gets the better of his enemies below the Rio Grande. Grand scenery, thrills and a better-than-usual story.

"Over The Wall" (Oriental Theatre, to-day).—A dramatic tale of convicts and their attempts to get away. It centres around a man falsely imprisoned for murder.

"Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—An exciting story of the turf, three juveniles, Ronald Sinclair, Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, and a horse providing the interest. An entertaining film.

PONIES CLASSIFIED

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Colic!—And You'll Jump Out of Bed Full of Vigor. The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks grim. Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those famous Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel clean and bright. Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red package. Refuse anything else.

NOT ENOUGH

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Palestine, partitioned and truncated is not enough to solve the torments of the Jews, declared Lord Rothschild, speaking at a demonstration at Friends House, Euston Road, in connection with the "Palestine Week."

He declared that when the Balfour Declaration was made no one dreamt of what was coming to the Jews, and there must be additional help from what is still the two most powerful and most just countries in the world, Britain and the United States.

Millions of innocents must not be exterminated for fun.

These two countries, however, may not be able to take increased numbers of refugees, themselves. Palestine cannot be a national home for all persecuted Jews. The future of the Jews in the world is a difficult problem, but I know it will be solved, declared Lord Rothschild.

Mr. Herbert Morrison criticised the weakness of the British administration in Palestine and said the British Government should facilitate Jewish immigration. There was no fundamental need for conflict between Arabs and Jews, and he urged the prevention of externally inspired disorder and the illicit smuggling of arms.—Reuter.

White-Anting Propaganda In Africa

Pretoria, Oct. 25.

A proposal to enable the authorities to deal more effectively with Nazi propaganda is believed to have been discussed today during a long interview between General Hertzog and Mr. Conradie, the South-West Africa Administrator.

After leaving General Hertzog, Mr. Conradie told Reuter that the Union section in South-West Africa was seriously perturbed by the confident tone of the German population in South-West Africa, which had become increasingly loud since the Munich agreement. The Union section, however, was still uncompromisingly hostile to deal with Germany.

It is believed General Hertzog assured the Administrator that the Union Government had no intention of relinquishing the mandate. The question of South-West Africa's defences was also discussed.—Reuter.

HALIFAX'S SPEECH SATISFIES

French And German Press Comment

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Qualified approval has greeted Lord Halifax's speech in both Berlin and Paris, but Germans have not yet been given the opportunity to read Lord Halifax's speech itself, since the official German News Agency issued only a condensed version of 100 words of the speech.

The Loyalist press is the only newspaper printing another version of the speech, and it comments approvingly on Lord Halifax's "firm resistance to the fatalistic view that war is unavoidable."

The paper welcomes the fact that the "British Foreign Minister stood up so energetically for continuation of a peace policy, and warned opposing circles from Mr. Anthony Eden to Mr. Clement Attlee against meddling in other people's internal affairs."

The French newspaper, Ordre, while agreeing that Viscount Halifax's declarations are irreproachable from an idealistic standpoint, thinks they are much less so from that of reality. After expressing doubts regarding the peace desires of Germany and Italy, the paper adds: "Either we are greatly mistaken or Lord Halifax's speech will have a result directly opposite to that he expects, the extension of Hitler's and Fascist claims, and giving the dictators the idea that real collaboration is that imposed by force."

The Figaro utters the warning that any Franco-German rapprochement arising from Hitler's reported offer to France of a non-aggression pact must not be allowed to drive a wedge between Britain and France.

Madame Tabouis in L'Ouvrier thinks that Lord Halifax's intentions were put forward as conditions for future negotiations, and declares that proposals are expected in London from Herr von Ribbentrop, and that immediately these are received by the British Cabinet, Herr von Neurath would go to London.—Reuter.

GOVERNMENTS MAIN OBJECTIVES

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in a message to the Government candidate in the Dartford by-election says that world appeasement, and national security with the consequent strengthening of the foundations of democracy are the Government's main objects.

In support of these the Government requires the fullest possible measure of support and co-operation. A united effort will be needed if legitimate pride in the British democratic institutions is to be maintained and justified in the eyes of the world.—Reuter.

Anglo-Italian Agreement Appears Safe

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Negotiations between Count Ciano and the British Ambassador, Lord Perth, have, according to the Yorkshire Post, been so successful that there is every prospect of the Anglo-Italian agreement coming into force about the middle of November.

It is expected that the question will be discussed by the Cabinet at its usual weekly meeting on Wednesday.—Trans-Ocean.

NEW ATTACK ON MADRID IS LIKELY

Hendaye, Oct. 25.

The sudden intense insurgent activity south of Madrid has caused speculation as to the possibilities of a new offensive on Madrid.

The Loyalists disclosed that the Insurgents attacked Toledo yesterday, that they staged a counter-attack on the Desan sector, 30 miles north-west of Toledo and 18 miles south of Madrid, and thence that they bombed Madrid.

It is asserted that machine-gun and artillery barrages repulsed all the attacks with heavy losses.—United Press.

Kam Tin Total Declines As "Chinese Go Back"

The Kam Tin Refugee Camp inhabitants have considerably diminished during the past few days and after to-day, the number will be less than 600.

The total that have passed through the camp since it was opened about a fortnight ago, is 3,100. Yesterday so many had returned to their villages or had been claimed by relatives that there were only 721 and of these, arrangements are being made, with the assistance of volunteer lorries, to transport 126 persons to Castle Peak from whence a ferry will take them to Po On District where they lived before the evacuation.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors by FRANKLIN FRANKLIN at 1 and 2, Wyndham Street in the City of Victoria, Hongkong.

One of the new blue wool materials makes the graceful coat frock with its Peter Pan collar, light sleeves. The afternoon dress is in patterned marocain with its flared front.

GOOD NEWS!

For the "In-Betweens"

New Frocks to Flatter You

NOT stock—yet not out-size, this was the worry of a reader who wrote to me complaining that she could never find a dress to fit.

Many women are stock fitting as far as bust and waist are concerned but their hip measurements are too large for frocks made with the usual sizes.

The patterned styles are especially designed to meet the needs of the in-between figure.

You are really in luck this season, as most of the fashion interest lies in the bodies of frocks, and it is by emphasizing the top part of your dress where you can afford extra width that you get the slenderizing line needed in the skirt.

A nice warm wool frock for early winter is your first requirement—yokes, pockets and loose sleeves trimmed with a contrasting colour are all smart details that you can be original about on the bodies.

Youthful Style

It is an attractive little dress in the new blueberry shade, with a chrysanthemum red contrast trimming round the pockets, down the front and on the sleeves to make it gay. The skirt has a single inverted pleat in front.

Pockets give you the width you need across the figure and they are fastened with zippers; the same fastening is used down the front, making the dress an easy one to pop into when you are in a hurry.

These zippers are quite simple to add it trained. Skilful cutting, setting and finger modelling after a shampoo transform a poor hairline if you begin early enough.

Super brushing

At least twice a week they have a super brushing. This is done by making a series of close partings and brushing in long straight strokes well away from the scalp.

The back hair is brushed vigorously towards the front and the scalp and roots well aired. At regular intervals—about four times a year—my sister uses a tonic.

A few drops are shaken on to each parting and massaged in with a circular movement which loosens the scalp. A tight scalp is the beginning of serious hair troubles and can be prevented by proper brushing and simple massage.

Pretty tough

BRUSHING and an occasional tonic treatment will keep the natural oil glands active. An exception can be made in the case of very dry hair, which benefits from an oil bath just before a shampoo.

Scalp and hair should be saturated in warm, pure olive oil, left on for one night and then washed with shredded Castile or best green soap.

David—the baby—hates having his hair washed, brushed or "fussed." One day his father took him to a grown-up barber's and let him watch "real men" being shampooed and combed.

He thinks he's pretty tough now when he dips his red head in the bathroom basin.

Kilted Front

A dressy frock for social dates is shown in the other pattern, No. 1196. This has also been designed for the in-between figure. It has a dainty, kilted front to give width, and a bishop's sleeve to emphasise your small waist while the downward lines of skirt not only ensure a slim hip-line, but give flattering length of line to the figure below the waist.

Contrasts are an important fashion note, so a second colour has been introduced on the collar.

Juniper or beagle green are my choice for this dress, with an ecru or pasteltinted collar if you like a light colour next to your face, otherwise clover or Chinese lacquer red, give you an original combination.

Be A Quick Shopper

DO you, as a housewife, complain of never having a minute to yourself? If so, save time on the daily shopping. Methodical attention may give you a few hours extra leisure weekly.

Prepare for your expedition by writing down the names of shops to be visited and articles required. A convenient order is with the most distant shop put first. You then only carry things once, which saves fatigue.

The method of asking for goods is either a help or a hindrance. Don't fuss! State what you require clearly, asking for certainties first and leaving queries until afterwards. Neither you nor the assistant will then get muddled; this saves his time and patience too.

Tendering the exact money is always a help; but if this is impossible, ask for change at the place where you know much money is taken. Minutes pass quickly while waiting at smaller shops for change to be obtained.

Wait your turn quietly. Other people's time is as valuable as yours. The ordinarily observant shopkeeper will notice, and serve you as soon as possible. On the other hand, never wait in shop where you are deliberately ignored.

No good shopper stands talking on the pavement. It is inconsiderate to block the way of others who may be pressed for time. Friends all bent on the same errand will usually prefer a smile and cheery word in passing.

Carrying different sorts of commodities sensibly prevents waste of time in readjusting them on the homeward journey. Either have a stout piece of cardboard, forming a partition in the centre of your basket, or take two carriers. One for meat and vegetables and the other for cleaner goods.

Above all, wear your most comfortable pair of shoes.

Salt Service

If a pinch of salt is added when stewing fruit, it brings out the full flavour.

It is not generally known that if new coloured garments are put into cold salt water for ten minutes before they are washed, this will fix the dye and prevent any likelihood of the colours running.

City dwellers will find that if curtains are steeped in salt water before washing, they will be much easier to wash because salt removes the soot from them.

The task of scrubbing new potatoes is made much easier if a little salt is dissolved in the water.

Tenaciously very often become discoloured inside, but the stains can very easily be removed if they are rubbed with a damp cloth which has been dipped in salt. A little salt on a damp cloth will also remove the brown stains on egg spoons.

Eggs with thin shells often crack when being boiled, and most of the white is wasted; but if a teaspoonful of salt is sprinkled in the water, the whites will not come through the shells.

Fibre brushes will last much longer if they are steeped in a strong solution of salt and water, before using. This hardens the fibre, and lengthens their life considerably. Add a little salt to the water in which cut flowers are placed, and they will keep fresh.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on a carpet will prevent stains. If carpets are given an occasional "dry-clean" with salt they will come up like new, as salt revives the colours. Simply sprinkle salt on the carpet and brush well. Carpets treated in this way always look fresh and new.

Ink stains are easy to remove if salt is put on the ink immediately it is salt.

Salt will quickly put out a fire in the chimney. Throw a few handfuls of salt on the fire in the grate, and in a few minutes the trouble will be overcome.

My Sister's Family by Kathleen Allison

When I was young, it was penny straight or tuppence curly. In our pre-war nursery, wiry corkscrews or insignificant plaits did their worst by us.

Even when the scissors released us from the bondage of combs, slides and black ribbons, our coiffures remained singularly unbecoming.

Memories of her own "skinned rabbit" locks made my sister begin early on her daughter's hair. And she didn't forget her sons, either. The other day she had the satisfaction of hearing her Mary say:

"I like my hair to be smarty"

SMALL girls need their hair "styled" as much as their mothers. Very early in life Selina and Mary were taken to a hairdresser who has enough sense to give serious attention to his customers of the future.

He took one look at Selina and saw that she wasn't going to bother much. He tailored her head so that, however much she tossed it, none of her hair fell into her eyes.

He showed her—clever fellow—what hair looks like under a microscope, and sold her mother a good hairbrush.

SELINA is, consequently, making her first attempts to titivate. She has experimented with plaits.

They suited her but were abandoned in favour of a demure middle parting, longish of black velvet and, being a band-side piece drawn to the back of box kind of child, they stay put from the head and made into a single plait.

This is a huge success because it is "different" enough to please nape of her neck, or two bows, one Selina's fast-growing vanity, and each side of her head, keeps her tidy enough to please her mother.

She goes to school with a neat, limp-like side at the end of her short pigtail; but for "best" she wears inch-wide ribbon tied in a neat, flat bow.

Clean brush

ALL the children possess two brushes and start each day—when they remember—with a clean one. Five minutes twice a day is my sister's allowance of brushing for hair.

MARY'S piquant little face looked insignificant with really short curly hair. She has that ash blonde then shine like new straw, colouring which can very easily look mousy and her face is really thin.

Short hair

Because Mary's hair didn't grow becomingly on her forehead, she had

Mothers In Blazing Liner

HE HAD PLAN TO END WAR

Dr. Rex Renshaw, a well-known chemist, and his wife were killed recently when they fell from the 19th floor of a New York apartment building.

Dr. Renshaw was experimenting with a chemical to "humanise" war by causing temporary paralysis to the soldiers.

He believed that one point of his chemical preparation loaded into a shell would render about a million men unconscious for several hours.

Police believe that one of the couple fell or jumped, and the other fell in attempting to save the first.

Told "T.N.T. On Board" BABIES RESCUED

Portland.

Ten passengers of the British liner Italian Prince (3,478 tons) landed at Portland recently and told how, as the ship was ablaze in the Atlantic, they heard that she was loaded with high explosive T.N.T. One of the passengers said: "We expected to be blown to smithereens at any minute. Soon after we had taken to the boats the Italian Prince was ablaze from end to end. No one knows what has happened to her."

The passengers told too how the six women on board scrambled up a 30-ft. rope ladder on to the Atlantide, Italian cargo vessel (6,300 tons), which picked them up after they had been tossed for an hour in a lifeboat.

With them were two babies.

"Yard" Spy Hunt Ends In Laughter

The discovery of a number of blueprints in a dustbin gave Scotland Yard a lot of trouble recently.

For blueprints suggested "secret plans," and that, in turn, suggested spies, and so the dustbin, with usual household contents, plus the blueprints, was taken to the Yard.

Kuala Kangsar.

While supervising rock blasting operations at the 23rd mile on the main road between Salak North and Sungai Siput recently, Mr. R. S. R. Lingham, P.W.D. Contractor, and Mr. A. S. Thambiah, Head Overseer, Sungai Siput, had a thrilling experience when they were suddenly confronted by a full grown tiger which emerged from a thicket nearby.

With great presence of mind, Mr. Lingham flashed his torch on the animal. The tiger, however, instead of being scared away started to come closer to him. Mr. Lingham then hurried to his car and sounded the horn and this, combined with the shouts of the coolies, must have scared the tiger, which disappeared into the thicket whence it originally came.

150,000 To 1 On A Blood Test

Odds against an error in deciding paternity by a blood test were 150,000 to one, said Dr. John Thomas, the pathologist, giving evidence at Middlesex Sessions.

Marie Louise Morrison, 26, unmarried, of Nelson-road, Hornsey, N., appeared against the dismissal of an application for a paternity order at Highgate.

TEST SUPPORTS MAN'S DENIAL

Mr. Frank Milton, her counsel, said that a decision on the infallibility of the blood test had not been given, and declared: "And the sooner its value is thrashed out by a superior court the better."

Sidney Baron, a manager, of Lunsmore-road, Stamford Hill, N., denied that he was the father of Miss Morrison's child.

POSSIBILITY OF ERROR

Mr. Milton asked for an adjournment so that a test might be made by another doctor on behalf of Miss Morrison, but the chairman ordered the hearing to proceed.

Dr. Thomas said that was almost impossible for Baron to be the father of the child, but he agreed that even with experience and care false results might unwittingly be obtained as a result of an error in getting the groups right.

SHOULD HUSBANDS AND WIVES HAVE SEPARATE FRIENDS?

SHE'S SIMPLY Gorgeous

"SHE" enters. All eyes are upon her. On every lip the question "who is SHE?"

Immaculate from head to foot - styled to the minute - looking as if she had just come from the hair-dresser.

And then the secret is out. SHE only goes occasionally to the hair-dresser to have her wave set—her hair is modernized. A friend tells how particular she is to shampoo—regularly—at home.

And there's really no trick to it. Discriminating women know that Mulsified leaves the hair soft and easy to manage—preserves the wave—makes it sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

Women who know will tell you that the natural oil in Mulsified nourishes the scalp—prevents its drying out. Free of harsh alkali, Mulsified is safe even for baby's tender scalp.

HE said

"For the very good reason, my dear, that I had a brand new box of du Maurier. Here! There's one left. You have it."

"Oh... those cigarettes with the cunning filter tips? Thanks, I'd like to!"

"There! See what I mean? Rather special aren't they? And no tell-tale tongue afterwards—however many you smoke!"

BEHIND THE SCENES IN THE MAKING OF "TEST PILOT" WITH CLARK GABLE — MYRNA LOY SPENCER TRACY IT'S THRILLING !!

Cameras and technicians work close to the ground almost beneath the spinning propellers.

Gable and Tracy had to learn the modern game of aviation before starting their roles.

A test pilot must be in full possession of all his faculties before leaving the ground.

To get the best results Gable was required to take a look at himself each day.

Spectacular take-off scenes require expert cameramen and clever distance calculation.

Motion pictures developed on location by new device. Studio laboratory not necessary.

Director Victor Fleming takes an active interest in the mechanical end of production.

Getting ready with cameras and lighting for a difficult three-point landing.

Gable, Tracy and Barrymore received daily aviation lessons from regular army instructors.

Cameras study the light before shooting sky formations.

Gable receives parachute instructions before making the dangerous jump.

Key shot. Test Pilot cameramen, like under bomber to obtain correct angles.

DEATH

WRIGHT.—At Alton, Hampshire, on 22nd October, 1938, Lucy (nee Danby), widow of the late R. T. Wright, formerly of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. (Japanese papers please copy).

The Hongkong Telegraph

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1938.

THERE CAN BE VICTORY IN DISASTER

The Chinese people will need all the moral support their friends can give to withstand the second disaster that has overtaken their country in less than a week, for morale and confidence necessarily must be badly shaken by the successive losses of Canton and Hankow, in peace-time the two largest cities in the country except Shanghai.

Chinese newspapers are probably much better adapted than British journals to telling the masses that the withdrawal from the Wuhan area was inevitable; that to fight in Hankow would have hurt China much more than Japan; that Chinese leaders, including Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, predicted early this year that the Japanese entry would be effected before July. That it is the tenth and not the seventh month of the year in which the Japanese can claim that they have reached their objective seems no cause for despondency on the part of the Chinese. They have made a gallant and impossible stand for the three cities when it would have been easy, and probably not much less fruitful, to draw the Japanese further into the hinterland. The story of Tehan is one that should be immortalised by China's historians of the future, for to the gallant defenders of this obscure and previously unknown village goes the honour of immobilising practically the entire might of Japan for three months.

China, reeling under two successive blows, temporarily is like a punch-drunk boxer. But with the withdrawal from Hankow and the taking up of new lines in more favourable terrain, she has gained a breathing spell for the next round. For Japan there is no such breathing spell. Entry into a city, even a city of the size and richness of Canton and Hankow (the riches of both cities, incidentally, have disappeared in the hour of the invaders' victory) does not end or relax the terrific strain under which she is conducting this war of aggression.

China, it should be reiterated,

TO-DAY a new generation of Etonians will hear about the Iron Duke.

Perhaps in these troubled times it is good that they should hear tell of a strong Irishman did Eton College great injury when, in a fit of generosity, he said, "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton."

Few believed this fantastic statement, few would have remembered it to this day if it were not the custom for every young Etonian to be told by the school authorities of the duke's foolish remark. Since this evil day Etonians have regarded themselves as the mainstay of the Army officer class, and the public have regarded Etonians with both distrust and suspicion.

THE public are biased at Etonians wear. "The top hat and tail coat for boys from the age of twelve upwards is ridiculous." "Is that school trying to educate the sons of the rich into effeminate fops?" That's what is said.

A century ago that would be a true statement. Eton was trying to educate its scholars into being little gentlemen and to wearing the same clothes as daddy.

Now, however, there is a better reason for keeping the Etonian uniform.

The headmaster of Eton, if he were questioned as to why he did not dress Etonians in clothes suitable to boys young in years, would probably answer: "Convicts are dressed in loud-striped overalls so that they can easily be seen when they escape. We can easily follow the top hat of an Etonian if he breaks bounds."

So rather pity the Etonian. His top hat and tail coat worry him more than you.

It is not easy to get your son dressed in a top hat and tail coat. It is expensive, too. To send a boy to Eton it is necessary to inscribe

HOW DO YOU PRAY?

MANY of us have started to pray again for the first time, perhaps since we were children. And we don't find it easy. We flop down on our knees and say, "O God, please let there be peace in the world, and if there must be war, don't let them kill me and my family."

A petition like that is not really a prayer, but a wish, and when you come to think of it, rather a selfish one. Why should you in particular be exempt from danger?

Those who get up from their knees after a prayer like that probably feel, "Well, now I've asked God to do what I want. If He doesn't do it I shall feel that He doesn't exist and that it is no good praying."

This frame of mind leaves such people very much where they were before they started praying, in a state of despairing half-belief. It is reducing God to the level of a lucky mascot.

All the same, half the battle is won by the willingness of people to trust something more than just clever wits and material strength. The most encouraging signs recently have been those of the public distaste for war. The question is: When you pray to God, what ought you to pray about?

The first thing for you to do is to acknowledge the existence of Evil. This should not be difficult. The dogs of war have rather barked their way into prominence recently.

The next thing is to remember that it is not for you to condemn any human being as wholly evil. You are not to pray for the destruction of those of whom you disapprove. God will destroy them, in the end, if they ought to be destroyed. God always triumphs over evil, because He is all-powerful and evil is only negative.

BUT God has more time to work His will than our short lives. Even Communists or dictators or Conservatives or whoever they may be whom you personally dislike must one day die.

But you can work against the will of God and assist evil and war by wishing destruction of people rather than of things. So when you pray, pray for justice, right and grace.

JUSTICE for all in the decisions which are being made to-day, not the sort of justice that was made at Versailles, but divine justice.

Right triumphs over wrong. Grace working in the hearts of all men, to bring about the triumph of good over evil.

And here you can dedicate yourself to God, to let Him use you as He wills. In this way, even if the prayers of the faithful cannot avert a war, you will be submitting yourself to the will of God and He will tell you what to do.

And if you want words in which to express all this and more, you will find them in the Lord's Prayer.

High Shields

Ex-pupil reports on his school

by LORD FORBES

AN Etonian, when he first goes to Eton, has to fog. The first six to ten boys will be able to order the arrivals to run errands for them. A young boy will have to be a fog from one to two years, according to how well he passed his original entrance examination.

Discipline in the house is maintained by the first five or six senior persons of the house. If a boy misbehaves the captain of the house has a right to beat him.

The permission of the house-master, or tutor as he is called at Eton, is as a rule asked before the culprit is punished. A boy can only be punished for house offences by the captain of the house.

If a boy does badly at his work he comes before the headmaster. The form master will complain to the headmaster that Mr. So-and-So is idle and should be flogged.

The headmaster then sends for the idle boy, and puts him on a white ticket. He is on a white ticket for ten days.

At the end of that time he must obtain the signatures of all his form masters on a ticket to say that his work has improved. If one of his form masters should fail to sign, the boy is summoned to the headmaster and is flogged with a birch.

Flogging at Eton is carried out with pomp and ceremony. The boy to be flogged is made to kneel on a block with his trousers down, a gentleman called a fusser then sits on the unfortunate's head, and one of the senior boys hands the birch to the headmaster. And the flogging marches on.

It is considered a great disgrace to be flogged by the headmaster. When I was at Eton the heavy hand of Dr. Allington, now Dean of Durham, was much feared. I never experienced the chastisement of the Dean of Durham.

HOWEVER, I once came near some offence to which I pleaded ignorance.

Said Dr. Allington: "You are either a fool or a knave. If I consider you to be a knave I shall fog you." I quickly explained to Dr. Allington that I was a fool. To my relief he agreed that I was a fool.

Eton provides a good education. When a boy first goes there he has to work about ten hours a day. When he gets older the volume of work is reduced, no doubt to accustom many to the life which they will live after they have left "dear mother Eton."

Etonians leave the school from the ages of seventeen to nineteen. Many Etonians go to the Royal Military College Sandhurst, and later the Army. Others go to the universities and others enter business.

When an Etonian leaves the headmaster bids him farewell and hands him a copy of Gray's "Elegy". The gift of this book is very important to an Etonian, for it shows that he left Eton in honourable circumstances and was not dismissed.

THE name of the departed Etonian will be carved on the panels of Upper School where Pitt once studied. Pitt started this custom for he carved his name on one of the shutters of Upper School. Etonians do this because they can then say, "I went to the same school as William Pitt."

What happens to Etonians? Some go to jail, some to the House of Commons as Tories, some become good ministers, some become night club proprietors, some generals, some stockbrokers, and others do nothing but live in the memory that they were once Etonians, and hold high the flag of black and blue.

DOCTOR'S VIEW OF ALCOHOL
Strong Condemnation

The National Federation of Christian Workers among Poor Children held their autumn rally and conference in Manchester. They visited the Central Library and listened to an address by Mr. C. Newell, Chief Librarian of Manchester. After tea at Wood Street Mission Hall, they conferred under the chairmanship of Councillor T. R. Ackroyd, and listened to Mr. Arthur Black, of London. Many of the delegates attended divine service at the Albert Hall, to which they were welcomed by the Rev. F. J. Gould. In the afternoon Dr. E. Vipont Brown addressed the conference on "Temperance" in the Charter Street Ragged Schools, Danzig Street.

Dr. Brown attacked the use of alcohol from the point of view of a medical man, and said that it had been shown by experiment that alcohol deteriorated the nervous system. The first effect of alcohol was to paralyse the highest nerve centres. Alcohol was one of the predisposing causes of consumption; it affected a man's judgment, destroyed his moral sense, and weakened his willpower and sense of honour. It was one of the causes of insanity and of melancholia.

It had been said that alcohol was a blessing in disguise because it carried off those who were least fitted to survive, but it affected men of the keenest sensibilities and sometimes the cleverest and the best.

Dr. Brown went on to discuss the effect of alcohol which enters in small quantities, and denied the popular theory that alcohol effectively warmed the body.

A hundred years ago, he said, there was a case of a member of the Society of Friends who had applied for insurance and been quoted a higher premium because he was an abstainer from alcohol. He was told that a young man who neglected the gifts of God was not expected to live long. Nowadays many insurance companies quoted a higher premium for non-abstainers and their action did not arise from any fanatical temperance opinions, but from hard business sense.

One questioner asked Dr. Brown whether alcohol should be used as a palliative in cases where certain workers were liable to suffer from lung troubles caused by dust, and he said that far from being a palliative, alcohol encouraged tuberculosis.

Mr. Newell told the delegates when he conducted them round the Central Library that although teaching a child to read and write was extremely important, what all teachers must realise was that it was equally important to educate the child in taste, and to encourage him or her to read the right books.

Nurse For Audience

Every time the big scene is approached in Emile Zola's melodrama, "Thou Shalt Not," at the Playhouse Theatre, London a nurse quietly slips into the auditorium, ready to deal with fainting women.

A girl sitting in the stalls screamed out last night, "Stop it! Stop it!" and collapsed. An old man at the back rose in his seat, exclaimed "I can't stand it," and stumbled out.

The scene is that in which Nancy Price, as an old woman, discovers that a young married couple staying at her house are the murderers of her son, and a member of the theatre staff said.

"We usually anticipate some kind of a disturbance in the audience at this point. So far, the action of the play has not suffered interference, but as a precaution members of the staff are stationed here and there to keep their eyes open for any faints."

MARRIAGE THEORY IS WRECKED ON LONE ISLE

Two hundred healthy descendants of the Bounty mutineers, living on lonely Pitcairn Island, have badly shaken the theory that inter-marriage in a community breeds degeneracy.

Mr. J. S. Neill, who, with a medical colleague, Dr. Duncan Cook, spent thirty-nine days on the island last year, says in a report issued recently that the theory has no sound basis if the original stock is sound.

He says the physique of the islanders is magnificent, their physical courage and strength remarkable. The island is well kept—evidence of "solid work."

For eighty years the island's medical history records an average of only one death a year.

Darker side of the picture is that the discipline of the family has degenerated. Children seem to do as they like. The art of cooking has sunk to a low standard.

To save the people's culture, says Mr. Neill, better education must be provided for the children.

The only amusement seems to be the playing of harmoniums and gramophones, and Mr. Neill suggests the installation of a wireless set for communal listening.

But to harassed taxpayers one feature of the mutineers' island will appear to outweigh many of its disadvantages.

At present, the only tax paid is a sun licence fee of sixpence a year.

This is used to buy stationery for the chief magistrate.

STORK SAVED HIM

The wife of a young lorry driver, Joseph Callard, of Ashley-road, Upper Parkside, Dorset, was expecting a happy event. In his hurry to get home Callard was gored on the main London-to-Bournemouth road for travelling at 40 to 42 miles an hour.

At Romsey Borough Police Court, Hampshire, recently, Callard, writing pleading guilty and his employer, who appeared on his behalf, explained that on the day of the offence Callard's wife was expecting a baby.

"I hope the baby arrived all right," commented Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon (the chairman), who announced that the summons would be dismissed.

WANTED MAN DEAD IN CHURCH PORCH

Wanted by the police on an information relating to 2900, Frank Charles Jeffery, hotel valuer (60), of Walton Road, Thorpe Bay, was found dead recently in the porch of a Southend church.

He had been missing since September 1. Death is believed to have been due to poisoning.

Jeffery, a native of Torquay, founded the West Country Association in Southend and was its president for many years.

UNDERGRADUATE OPINION ON NEED FOR UNIVERSITY

A CULTURAL CENTRE FOR MALAYA

The possible formation of a Malayan University as a result of the investigations which began recently of the McLean Commission is the subject of keen discussion in both the colleges in Singapore.

Undergraduates, especially freshmen, have for weeks past been speculating on their chances of obtaining degrees on leaving college, instead of the present diplomas.

Urging the creation of a Singapore University, an undergraduate at Raffles College pointed out that the college diploma is recognised only in Malaya, and thus the chances of holders finding appointment outside this country are negligible.

"The development of the intellectual classes," he continued, "especially the Asiatic and European element, in proportion to the population of this country is below the average compared with other countries of equal, if not less, economic development, as for instance Ceylon."

"What is needed is a University second to none, which will not only be a means of preserving the cultural heritage of Malaya, but also adequately meet the growing needs of higher education in a heterogeneous and cosmopolitan population."

He observed that the establishment of a university here will give Malayan youth not merely education of a university standard, but also by virtue of a degree, greater recognition of their worth than at present.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

The decisions of the Government as announced by Sir Shenton Thomas at the Raffles College reunion dinner in November last year, in regard to the awarding of Queen's Scholarships, from 1941 from Raffles College, the appointment of a principal for the college, and the decision of the Federated Malay States to send Malay officers for the administrative service on a special college course and above all the coming arrival of the Education Commission augured well for the future.

"Higher education in Malaya can never be complete without a University," another student said.

"The controversy over the formation of a University was carried out with much enthusiasm in the local Press some time past; that the arrival of the Commission will again draw the attention of the Malayan public to this need."

"Raffles College affords a University training, yet students are not recognised as possessing University status; our graduates have undergone university courses of equal standard with corresponding courses in British universities, yet they are not recognised as university-trained men and women."

"If they desire to further their studies in British universities, they are not even exempted from the first year course of the particular branches of study which they have carried to degree standard at Raffles College.

MORE STUDENTS

The number of students at the College is steadily increasing. This year Raffles College admitted about 150 freshmen.

Asked what students thought of the proposal that instead of forming a University, Raffles College men should be prepared for London University degrees, one reply was that even if the college curriculum is planned to enable a student to sit for London external examinations, this was not conducive to the evolution of a culture that would harmonise with the natural surroundings and historical background of this country.

It would, in effect, reproduce conditions in Ceylon and Raffles College will be to Malaya what University College is to Ceylon—a place for turning out London external degree passers.

Those who urge the establishment of a Malayan University, of which the two colleges would be the nucleus draw attention to a passage which appears as a condition in one of the endowment scholarships:

"If for any reason a Singapore University shall not have been founded on or before the first day of January 1948 then in that case the trustees shall stand possessed of the trust fund."

COLONIAL PRINCIPLE

One student observed that since the policy of British administration in the colonies, as outlined by Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, is "to teach the peoples of the Colonies to stand a little more securely on their own feet" what could better meet this purpose than the establishment of a Malayan University?

Those opposed to the formation of a University in Singapore base their arguments on three main grounds. The first objection is the insufficient number of students. Secondly, by virtue of its being essentially a commercial city, Singapore would reap little benefit from the formation of a university.

BOY CLOSED THE SCHOOL

Two boys, aged 10 and 11, who had a grudge against their teacher, took their revenge by wrecking the school so badly that it had to be closed for a day.

Windows and furniture were smashed with a hammer and paint squeezed all over a room.

At Pontefract (Yorks) juvenile court recently the boys were accused of breaking and entering the school at Hemsworth, committing malicious damage and stealing money.

The boys' parents attributed the action to "the pictures."

The Bench decided to suspend judgment for six months for a report on the boys' home conditions.

tion of a university, and lastly that it would involve a considerable expenditure to maintain such an institution.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED

To these objections, all students are ready with replies. The first argument, that the number of students is not sufficiently large to justify the formation of a university, is no longer tenable, it is pointed out.

The College of Medicine, for example, has been rejecting a large number of applications for the last few years.

The danger of producing excess of clerical workers is the argument put forward against the second objection.

The formation of a Malayan University will certainly produce the desired effect—to arrest the exodus of Malayan students to universities abroad, and especially Hongkong.

HONGKONG DEGREES

The cost of higher education in both Hongkong and Singapore is about the same, but, whereas the Hongkong University graduate obtains a degree, his counterpart gets only a diploma.

It has been estimated that it costs nearly as much to maintain Raffles College as it is run at present, as it would to incorporate it as a Malayan University.

It has been suggested that the various governments of Malaya should set aside funds to bring a University into being.

An interesting comparison is made with Java, where a similar financial difficulty has been partly overcome. The Dutch believe that a university depends not on the external impressive structure of the college buildings, but in the thoroughness given.

The three colleges in Java which constitute a University can confer a Master's degree in Medicine, Engineering or Law and recognised as such in Holland.

Some graduates of Raffles College are wondering what, in the event of the formation of a Malayan University, will be the standing of the graduates who have obtained diplomas before the establishment of the university?

SHANGHAI INTERPORT BOWLERS DESERVE SUCCESS

TEAM SPIRIT CARRIES VISITORS THROUGH

(By "Abe")

To say that the form revealed by the Hongkong Interport bowls rinks in the recent matches against Shanghai was disappointing is but to express mildly the feelings of those who had had such great faith in the players selected to do duty for the Colony.

Shanghai won the 1938 series without any undue trouble, annexing the second and third Interports after the first had been adjudged a tie. The results of each match were—First Interport, 20-20; Second Interport, Shanghai won by 30-10; and Third Interport, Shanghai won by 20-17.

Except to a certain extent, for the rink which opposed Shanghai in the first match at Kowloon Docks, neither rink in the second or third did themselves justice.

Of the four men in the opening game, only A. R. Dallas and, in a lesser degree, B. W. Bradbury distinguished themselves. A. E. Coates, at No. 1, failed to reach his usual high standard, while J. McKelvie was absolutely off colour and did little right.

ONLY ONE SHINES

In the second game, only H. A. Alves accomplished anything of note. The other three members of the rink, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher and J. Hollidge (skip) were very poor. It is rather late in the day to criticise the positioning of the players, but it does appear significant, though, that the only man of the four who did well, H. A. Alves, was the one who had had Interport experience.

With three men playing on their own green in the Hongkong rink, it was expected—and rightly so—that the local men would have the advantage in the third game on the Club de Recreio green. But once again those who were playing on a green they knew well proved the greatest disappointments. It was left to U. M. Omar, the skip, to play the best game of the four.

It will thus be seen that of the six now caps, A. R. Dallas, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher, J. Hollidge, F. X. M. da Silva and J. A. da Luz, only Dallas can be said to have justified his inclusion.

Last I be misunderstood, however, let me hasten to add that there was, in my opinion, little wrong with the actual selections of the players; it was only in the play that the local representatives let their selectors down.

NOT BETTER PLAYERS

Even now, after all three Interport matches have already been decided, I cannot understand why Shanghai won so easily. I have followed the visitors around in their matches with the various clubs, and I find it difficult to believe that they are so much better than our three rinks. Admittedly in Hugh Wallace, they have a skip who would be difficult to beat in any company; he revealed sufficiently in the Interport matches to prove himself a player of the highest calibre. Also in A. M. Gutierrez, the visitors have a very reliable man indeed in any position.

However, the form shown by the others was nothing but of the ordinary. For instance, W. J. MacDermott, of whom so much was expected, was very disappointing from the Shanghai point of view; K. L. Swartzell, the American member of the team, was merely steady; and the same remark might be applied to J. M. C. Lopes, J. W. Brierley and A. M. Gerrard, who did not take part in the Interport matches.

While in actual play they might not have been so much better than the Hongkong men, in team spirit, however, they were immeasurably superior. As Hugh Wallace remarked at the Interport dinner, "overly

FAST GREENS

A contributory cause was also the speed of the green. Accustomed as they are to heavier greens, the Hongkong men found the fast greens at Kowloon Docks, Civil Service and Recreio too much for them. On the other hand, the Shanghai men, used to fast greens, found local conditions at this time of the year ideal for them.

Congratulations, Shanghai! The visitors have proved themselves popular in every club in the Colony. They leave by the Wing-sung on Thursday evening. Hongkong will be looking forward to seeing them here again shortly!

I do not wish to conclude this article on a carping note, but I do feel that the decision made in the first Interport in calling it a draw was an inexplicable one. And that was why I was so pleased when Shanghai won the Third Interport; as holders of the Prentice Cup, the visitors were entitled to retain the trophy even if the series had ended in a tie of one game each, but by winning the third match, Shanghai's victory was clear-cut.

With the latest success, Shanghai has lengthened its margin of victories over Hongkong in the series, having won 12 to Hongkong's eight.

Prospects Of Triangular Rugger Interport Are Extremely Rosy

Although Shanghai has not definitely undertaken to send a team to Hongkong, there is every prospect of a triangular rugby Interport between Shanghai, Malaya and Hongkong taking place in the Colony during February, 1939.

Malaya has confirmed its decision to send a team here, and the latest information from Shanghai is to the effect that the northerners will make every effort to raise a strong representative side for the Interport with Hongkong. The possibility of a triangular Interport is expected to exert a strong influence on negotiations.

According to the Shanghai Times, the visit to Hongkong by a Shanghai team will be made over the Chinese New Year holidays. Whether this date will coincide with the time of arrival of the Malayan team is not yet known in Shanghai, but it remains for Colony officials to suggest a date agreeable to both Malaya and Shanghai.

The Shanghai Rugby Union Football Club is displaying great interest over the reported plans for a triangular Interport.

Len Harvey To Fight Eddie Phillips

Len Harvey and Eddie Phillips signed on October 8 to fight for the British heavyweight boxing championship at Harringay Arena, London, on November 17. Phillips was nominated by the British Boxing Board of Control as the leading contender for the title when it was vacated by Tommy Farr. Afterwards the Board stipulated that Phillips should meet Harvey for the championship. Phillips has been beaten twice already by Harvey, the last time being in Plymouth about three years ago. Harvey, who is thirty-one, holds the British cruiser-weight championship, and now has a chance of regaining the championship which he held before Jack Petersen took it from him in 1934.

Big Controversy In United States Over Foot-Fault Rules

The foot-faulting of A. K. Quist at the critical stage of the first set of his Davis Cup single against D. Budge at Germantown seems still to be the subject of much contention and criticism in the United States, writes F. R. Burrow in the Observer.

At the time of the incident the stands were roused to uproar, in sympathy with the Australian, who was repeatedly foot-faulted both on his first and second service. This upset both the players, and a fine match was spoilt.

But it must be said, and with the utmost emphasis, that it was not spoilt by the foot-fault judge, but by the player who repeatedly broke Rule 7. It was complained that Quist's infraction of the rule was "only a technical infraction," and asked why he had not been foot-faulted earlier in the match, but only when the crisis of the set arrived.

Now there is no such thing as a "technical" infraction of a rule. Either the server is serving fairly, or he is serving unfairly. If he is serving unfairly he ought to be penalised and must be penalised by a linesman or foot-fault judge (if there is one) who knows his duty.

APT TO FORGET

As to only putting the law in motion at the moment of crisis, it is quite possible (though, to those who have watched Quist play, improbable) that this service had been fair up to the point at which he began to be penalised.

It is just at these critical moments that even an ordinary fair server is apt to forget his normal strictness in his anxiety to get to the net; and, since these critical moments are just as critical for his opponent as for himself, it is all the more necessary that he should be prevented from gaining an unfair advantage—even if it is unintentionally unfair—over him.

Wimbledon habits will not have forgotten a similar incident when J. H. Crawford was playing F. J. Perry, in 1933. In the first of the championship, Crawford, normally a scrupulously fair server, was making his last stand, coming in on every thing and risking all on a net attack.

At match-point to Perry, Crawford served and followed in, only to be foot-faulted for infringing the rule by swinging over in his haste to get to the net. He served his second service into the net! And the match was over.

VERY NECESSARY

That foot-fault judge was bitterly

attacked by a great many people who ought to have known better; but as he very pertinently inquired, "Is a foot-fault not a foot-fault when it is at match-point?" To which no reply is possible. It was unfortunate; but the fault was the player's, not the linesman's.

The rule is a necessary rule; without it, players might serve from any part of the court they liked. And, so long as it is a rule, it should be enforced, not only in high places, but in the ordinary run of tournament play. Budge never foot-faults; Perry was a scrupulously fair server. If men like these can be "world-champions" while obeying the rules, lesser fry ought to be proud to follow their example.

One of the troubles is that a great many players break the rule without realising that they do so; they have not the slightest intention of being unfair to their opponents. But until some linesman or umpire is courageous enough to pull them up, it is not surprising that they go on breaking the rule nearly every time they serve.

SPECTACLES AND FOOTBALL

If footballers wear spectacles they ought to have unbreakable lenses. So the Football Association has decided. The question was raised at the monthly meeting of the Lancashire Football Association Council. Bury Amateur League wrote that two players wear glasses. The League feared they might injure themselves or other players and therefore asked for a ruling.

An F.A. official stated that there was nothing in the rules to prevent a bespectacled player taking part in a match, but the Association recommended that they should use unbreakable lenses. There are no bespectacled players in first-class football to-day. "Old boys" among the fans, however, will recall Mitchell, the Manchester City goalkeeper of 10 or 12 years ago, who wore his glasses while playing.

BRITISH GOLFERS IN LINE WITH THOSE OF AMERICA & CANADA

(By Geoffrey Simpson)

London, Sept. 29.

We are getting on in golf . . . the R. & A., as we guessed, have made the 14-club limit official. From the Spring it will be against the law and horribly unporting to use more than 14 clubs, or even carry a bag holding more than that number.

It brings British golfers into line with those of the United States and Canada, who have already made it a rule, but do we care very much? Yes, we do. It means that the rusty iron we carried around for no reason at all except that it was an old favourite and looked well in the bag has got to go, because at present we are over the limit.

Golfers are queer folk. So many like to carry a bag full of clubs, half of which they do not use. In the women's championship at Aldeburgh this week, Pam Barton has played the grandest golf with a bag of 16 clubs (including one very old iron), eight of which she never touched.

Now Miss Barton must cast two aside, because she is out of order in carrying 16. But I doubt whether she has ever played with 14 clubs during a round in her life. And that is true of almost every golfer who carries a large bag.

AVERAGE BAG—12
An interesting piece of information is that a check on the number of clubs employed nowadays has been made at Aldeburgh this week.

A representative of a manufacturing firm has been going round counting the number of clubs the women golfers have taken on to the course, and his statistics show that the average bag is 12—three woods and nine irons.

The same figure is probably true of male golfers, so that the restriction is not going to make golf more difficult.

In fact, the chief reaction of golfers to the new rule will be that it is superfluous.

At the same time it is advisable to remember that the rule exists, for the penalty, if caught in the dread net of carrying one club too many, is disqualification.

ANOTHER BALL?

What is more likely to get golfers by the ears is the announcement that the R. & A. believe the time is opportune for a reduction of flight in the golf ball. The question is to be considered by the committee.

In this they will be opposed. Another eccentricity of the golfer is that he likes to be flattered, and when he gets a ball he can drive five yards farther than any other he has used, he is as pleased as an angler who has landed a catch he can talk about.

The golf ball has been experimented with for years, but the general opinion is that the present ball cannot be improved upon.

I have it on the authority of a big manufacturer that another 40 to 50 yards "carry" could be added to the golf ball. "At the same time," the staff of scientists we employ could easily turn out a ball that would travel 50 yards less," he said.

"But whether we put extra distance on or took it off, the game would be spoiled. I do not see any cause for readjustment."

In my opinion, if the flight of the ball is reduced it will interfere seriously with the game of the ordinary player. And it is the ordinary golfer who matters most, though there is a tendency in high places to forget this and to think only of the front-rankers who get their names in the papers.

MAN WHO MATTERS
In all matters such as this it is the majority for whom the authorities should legislate.

It is the Saturday afternoon player in cricket, the small club man in lawn tennis, and the 10-handicap enthusiast in golf who make the wheels of sport go round.

How often are their interests forgotten!

Of course, it does not follow that the R. & A. will change the ball, even if they mean to talk about it. It is hopeful, at any rate, that the manufacturers have not been officially consulted . . . and not even the R. & A. can alter the ball without the help of the trade.

Craigengower
Has Had A Good YearAnnual Meeting
Held Yesterday

A satisfactory report was presented at the forty-fifth annual general meeting of the Craigengower Cricket Club, held yesterday. The financial position of the Club was declared to be good, but there was a big increase in members.

The President, Mr. D. W. Bradbury, warned that unless there was a marked improvement, the cash position of the Club would be seriously affected.

Presenting the report and statement of accounts, Mr. Bradbury said:

The annual report and statement of accounts having been in your hands for the period prescribed by the rules of the Club, I will, with your permission, take them as read.

Before proceeding with the business of the meeting, I desire, on behalf of the Club, to express sympathy with the relatives of the late Mr. W. D. Bradwood and Mr. E. H. Inchcombe, both of whom passed away during the year.

Mr. Bradwood was the founder of the Craigengower Cricket Club, and on the foundation laid by him nearly half a century ago, the Club has grown to what it is to-day. As a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Bradwood and Mr. Inchcombe, I would ask you all to rise and remain standing for a brief moment.

Your Committee is very gratified in being able to present to you a Balance Sheet that must be considered very satisfactory. The profit for the year, viz. $326.88, shows an increase of $122.15 over last year.

This, itself, represents a good showing, but when you take into consideration the very liberal allowance for depreciation, plus a sum of $500 transferred to a doubtful Debts Reserve Account, I think you will all agree that "satisfactory" is the correct word to use.

Bar earnings for the year, as you will see from the income and expenditure account, show a decrease of $228.88 over last year, which is probably due to more conservative spending on the part of our members, owing to the present conditions. Still, the result is very pleasing and Mr. Bann and his colleagues of the Bar Sub-Committee are to be commended for a job well done.

Billiard receipts are down; in fact, the revenue from this source has not been in keeping with the large amount invested in putting the tables (particularly Table No. 1) in first class condition. There has been some discussion as regards the method of paying for these games. I trust that this can be cleared up satisfactorily and that, with the advent of various competitions, better returns will be obtained.

Like to take this opportunity of thanking the various members whose helpful advice made the work on the improvement of the tables very much simpler.

Subscriptions showed a healthy rise, this being due to the increase which came into effect last year. With an increase in new members, entrance fees are also up, and this is indeed pleasing. As you will observe, income under sundry receipts reached a very substantial figure, and members who have studied the accounts carefully will readily appreciate what this source of income means to the Club. Allow me to compliment the Social Sub-Committee for their splendid work. The Club is indeed grateful to them and to the various members who have assisted from time to time.

Expenses increase. Cost of teas has risen by quite a margin, and, although this has been looked into very carefully, I do not anticipate any appreciable decrease, owing to the higher cost of necessities.

Bad debts written off is small, but I had hoped for an even smaller figure. However, I am still optimistic enough to hope that this item can be entirely eliminated in future.

Turning to the balance sheet, your particular attention is directed to the amount of depreciation on the building, gear, furniture and fixtures and crockery, amounting in all to $2,006.51. On the advice of our auditors, a greater allowance was made under this heading, and I am sure you will agree that this is a very wise move. Our Auditors also recommended transferring $500 to a Bad and Doubtful Debts Account, and as you will have noticed, this recommendation has been carried out.

Under assets, you will observe that bowls gear and tennis gear have been increased considerably, this being due to the purchase of a new lawn mower, which became an absolute necessity. New tennis nets and screens were also obtained during the year.

The heavy increase under furniture and fixtures is accounted for by the purchase of a large number of tables and chairs which were required for our whist and tombola functions.

Our cash position is quite sound, and, although we have less cash on hand than last year, this is offset by our having replaced the sum of $2,000.00 on fixed deposit.

Summing up, I wish to reiterate that the financial position of the Club is satisfactory, but there is one discordant note to sound, and that is the big increase in members' accounts outstanding. This is most disconcerting, and unless there is a marked improvement, it will not be long before our cash position will be seriously affected. I should like to take this opportunity of appealing to the members concerned to see that their accounts are paid more promptly in future. This is one way in which they can really help the Club, and I am confident that those of you who have been tardy in the past will now appreciate what this means to the Club and will not fail to co-operate more fully in this respect.

Sporting Activities. And now I come to the sporting activities of the Club during the past year. First mention must be made of our cricketers, who did extremely well. The senior team shared the championship with the I.R.C. after two undecided replays, from which we emerged victorious.

The junior team finished flying. The season was unfortunately not winning the championship. I am particularly pleased with the success of the cricketers, for, in my report just a year ago, I predicted that the happy blending of youth and experience that we possessed would soon show results. That would soon show results. That would soon show results. That would soon show results.

Turning to lawn bowls, I cannot but mention the fact that the Inter-Club taken place this year, at least two of our young players must have gained recognition.

Australian
Cricketers
From England

Melbourne, Oct. 25. The Australian cricketers returned to Australia to-day. Don Bradman declared he had fully recovered from his recent injury and would be able to play in the match between the Test team and the rest of Australia at Melbourne on December 9. Bradman also said that when the next test series was played in Australia, serious opposition might be expected from England as she had many promising young players. He added that he thought five days long enough for a result in one test match. —Reuter Bulletin.

TO THE

"Test Pilot" (King's Theatre, to-day).—As violently exciting as the scream of a speed plane in a power dive, the latest and probably the best of the air pictures evokes the atmosphere of terror and tension in which the test pilot lives. There are several spectacular air scenes. The playing throughout is splendid. Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore are all splendid in the cast.

"Bulldog Drummond in Africa" (Queen's Theatre, to-day).—Latest of the adventures of the famous Supper character, set this time in an African jungle, with all its opportunities for cinematic thrills. John Howard again plays the title role, and Heather Angel is the romantic interest.

"In Old Mexico" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—William Boyd in the character of Hopalong Cassidy again gets the better of his enemies below the Rio Grande. Grand scenery, thrills and a better-than-usual story.

"Over The Wall" (Oriental Theatre, to-day).—A dramatic tale of convicts and their attempts to get away. It centres around a man falsely imprisoned for murder.

"Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—An exciting story of the turf, three juveniles, Ronald Sinclair, Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, and a horse providing the interest. An entertaining film.

PONIES CLASSIFIED

The following alterations and additions have been made by the Hongkong Jockey Club to the pony classification lists dated June 7.

THE NAUGHTY 'NINETIES

THE "naughty 'nineties" Much has been written about the nineteenth century, and the follies and frailties of many of the citizens of that time.

The capital of Scotland, like other cities, had its black spots, but, when a comparison is made, Edinburgh has no need to be ashamed of the part she played during the Victorian era.

Those who have made a study of the "characteristics" of Auld Reekie are alive to the fact that the majority of the people took their pleasures sedately.

Night clubs and dance halls were few, and many of the noted howffs in the centre of the city were disappearing, or being well kept within the bounds of the vigilant eyes of the police.

Places of entertainment, such as the Theatre-Royal and the Princess's, in Nicolson Street, with their powerful supporting companies in tragedy and melodrama, were playing to "capacity."

The circus, with its ever-alluring sawdust ring, was always a welcome visitor; while, at the foot of Blackfriars Wynd, Hickey's and Ferris's "penny gergies," with their versatile "mummers," never failed to draw the denizens of the Royal Mile. There patrons could get three shows a night, from Shakespeare to the blood-curdling drama of "The Dumb Man of Manchester."

Free-and-easies

Many "free-and-easies" had established themselves in Edinburgh before the advent of the "naughty 'nineties." What undoubtedly gave them a new lease of life was the popular songs and catchy choruses then being sung in the London supper rooms and variety music-halls.

The fame of the artists had spread to the provinces, and this form of entertainment became very popular. Almost every tavern that possessed a suitable backroom and a tinkling piano nightly drew crowds of young men anxious to "try out" the latest London ditties of Harry Clifton or the Great Vance.

This was followed by the "naughty 'nineties" and increased the attraction of the public-house "sing-songs," the most notable being Bryce's, at 61 Princess Street, with Norman Thompson as chairman.

What a galaxy of "stars" at that period were appearing in the old London music-halls! I have heard most of them, and they have never been surpassed.

Occasionally we hear on the radio the same old words and the same old tunes, but the vocal efforts of the "moderns" compared with the old-timers—well, the less said the better!

Saturday evening concerts were held in St. Mary Street Hall, the Good Templar Buildings, High Street; the Golden Mile, South Bridge, and Trinity Hall, Kirkcaldy, Leith, the usual charge for admission being threepence.

The Boy Launder

It was at St. Mary Street Hall that Sir Harry Launder made his first public appearance in Edinburgh when a lad not yet eighteen. The "numbers" he sang on that occasion were, "The Boor Dook Swimming Club," "The Bleacher Lassies' Ball," and "Which of the Two is the Oldest—the Father or the Son?"

The opening of the Gaiety Music Hall, in Chambers Street, on 5th July, 1875, was of more than passing interest to the citizens of Edinburgh. This was not the first home of vaudeville in the capital, for there stood at that time a wooden erection, known as the Alhambra, and owned by Harry West, on the fair ground at the head of Leith Wynd (now Jeffrey Street).

Other shows that drew the crowd to this vacant piece of ground at the Netherbow were Swanlow's Circus, Pepper's Ghost, the Fat Lady, the Living Skeleton, sword-swallowing Zulus, boxing booths, cheap Jacks, and merry-go-rounds.

Harry West's Alhambra had a short existence, but it did not deter the Hall Company, Ltd., from making a bold attempt to establish a place of variety at a spot noted as having been where the house once stood, at the head of College Wynd, where Sir Walter Scott was born.

The comfortable little theatre had an auspicious opening, but laxity in its management forced the proprietors to close its doors, after it had carried on for almost two years.

Undeterred by the closing order of the Magistrates, a young man from Greenock secured the lease of the Old Gaiety. The hall was reopened on 24th December 1877. With that indomitable pluck and business capacity that never failed him through life, he resolved that the Moss varieties would be run on clean lines.

"Purified" Stage

This, for a time, did not appeal to many of the old patrons, and the performers sang to half-empty benches. Nevertheless, Moss was determined that a purified atmosphere should prevail in the Chambers Street house, in spite of his struggles and financial difficulties.

The task that the lessee and his manager, Mr. Leonard B. Brownell, had set themselves, proved no easy one. In spite of notices prominently displayed in the dressing-rooms, some of the artists took the risk of putting across the footlights suggestive songs of a type quite common in London. This resulted in the singer's engagement being cancelled on the spot.

At the snack-bar of the University Hotel, which was above the entrance to the Moss Varieties, I have heard the fired "pros" bitterly complaining in lurid language, of the high-handed policy adopted in their getting the "sack." They predicted an early "wash out" for the little theatre, which didn't come off.

Old-Time Edinburgh and Its Amusements

By Councillor WILSON M'LAREN

Also realising that bumper houses could only be brought about by strengthening his programme, Moss engaged weekly a "star" with a London reputation. In a short time respectable people forgot their scruples and flocked to the "Varieties."

Then the young man from Greenock began to lay the foundation of the fortune that ultimately built Empire Theatres throughout the Kingdom. This is not to be wondered at when such artists as Tom MacLagan, and Frederick Macenab, of "Begone, Dull Care," renowned, were booked to appear. Others who followed were George Leith, the Lion Comique, of "Champagne Charlie" fame, the Great Macdermott, who brought down the house with his patriotic song, "We Don't Want to Fight, but by Jingo, If We Do"; Jenny Hill, the Vital Spark; and Lottie Collins, who sang into world-wide popularity, "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay."

Edinburgh's "Steadiness"

"The 'Naughty Nineties' were in full swing throughout the country during Moss's management of the Gaiety. True to the policy adopted at the beginning of his career, my old friend never wavered, with the result that the songs and patter were strictly forbidden.

For fifteen years, from 1877 till the opening of the Empire Theatre of Varieties in Nicolson Street, on November 7th, 1902, this great music-hall pioneer carried on at the Chambers Street house, to be rewarded by a knighthood by King Edward in 1905, in recognition of the part he played in the elevation of the music-hall entertainment.

Newspaper "scoops" regarding nightclub life in London, or the matrimonial adventures of the glamorous Gaiety Girls, did not set the hearer on fire in the capital of Scotland. To her credit, she had not gone crazy during the "Naughty Nineties."

Attempts that were made to create a continental atmosphere soon proved abortive, and the young men of the town, out for a splash of colour, quickly realised that their "high jinks" were far from a popular and paying proposition.

Since those hectic times when frivolity-loving devotees burned the candle at both ends, socially Auld Reekie has remained a steady barometer, and much improved on "the gaudy old days."

Mysteries of Ancient Angkor

ANGKOR is said to be the most amazing discovery in the world. But even greater than the marvel of its inception is the mystery of its decline. This city of a million people, deserted by its creators, engulfed by tropical jungle and lost for four hundred years, was rediscovered purely by chance. Such is the astounding history of these magnificent ruins.

Toward the early part of the fifteenth century, the fame of Angkor and its treasures had spread far and wide, to Siam and Java and Annam, and the Khmer kings were being hard pressed on every side. It is conjectured that they believed Angkor to be too vulnerable and evacuated completely. It is a matter of history that, by the middle of the fifteenth century, they had removed the capital of their kingdom to Phnom Penh. But why none of the attacking races ever found Angkor and plundered it, and, above all, why the culture of the Khmers never again expressed itself elsewhere, is an unsolved mystery. Angkor was overwhelmed by the swiftly encroaching jungle, and the art which had created its wonders was apparently exhausted; for the Khmers sank back to the level of a primitive people and their culture was obliterated.

After seeing Angkor oneself, one can vividly picture, and in part even share, the feelings of the Frenchman—Mouhot—who in 1861 stumbled by chance on these ruins. Only three days before, he had written in his diary: "A superstitious dread of the jungle has kept the region in which we are now travelling free from natives, and so, under the protection of a tabu, the wild life probably has flourished as nowhere else in the world. . . . The story of hidden cities in this part of the world becomes more and more absorbing as one penetrates the jungle. It is manifest that there has never been any civilisation in this region. If there are cities in this wilderness they must date back to the time before Adam." Eloquent of the effect which his staggering discovery had upon him is the entry made after his return to himself the finest productions, perhaps, of the architecture of all ages dumped down in the depths of these forests, in one of the remotest countries of the world, a wild, unknown, deserted tract.

Although all the approaches to Angkor have now been cleared and one can get there easily by car or bus, more than enough of the jungle remains around it for the present-day visitor to understand Mouhot's amazement. Standing on the only small hill that there is in Angkor—Phnom Bakheng—at dusk one evening, beside its tiny, roofless temple, we looked across a vast expanse of unbroken jungle. Faint on the western sky was the line of hills from which the ancient Khmers quarried their stone, brought it down the Siemreap river on rafts to Angkor. In all directions save this the horizon rimmed a huge plain as flat and as green as the sea, whose forests still kept their mysterious secret safe from the world. Even the great towers of Angkor Wat and the Bayon can scarcely be discerned amongst them.

Exploring the various ruins at close quarters, one is amazed at the damage wrought by the air trees (fromagers, the French call them) whose tall, roach-like branches and walls and arches split open roofs and then looking them fast at all angles in a grotesque strangeness. To these relentless wreckers, more than to time or climate, most of the monuments owe their extreme decay. Yet Angkor Wat, the most impressive of all, is scarcely damaged; for its wide surrounding moat preserved it from the jungle, and all the eight centuries that have passed since its erection have left it comparatively untouched and with an ageless grandeur that is in startling contrast to the conquering marks of time elsewhere. Its huge size is balanced by perfectly harmonious proportions. The entrance causeway, broken part-way by the Royal Porch, has a total length of over two thousand feet, its famous gallery is six hundred and fifty-four feet long, and the central tower is two hundred and thirteen feet in height. As Mouhot says: "At sight of this temple, the mind feels crushed, the imagination staggered; one can but gaze admiringly and in respectful silence, for where indeed are words to be found to praise a marvel of architecture that has perhaps never been equaled in the whole world?"

Yet, even after seeing it all, the imagination cannot conjure up a vision of what this capital must have been in the sumptuous days of its glory. Only an intense, and overwhelming quiet remains, and a sense of complete severance from modern civilisation.

Only on the last night of our stay did we experience something which brought back to us in some degree the life of that ancient kingdom. This was a performance of the "Cambodian Ballet," given on the causeway of Angkor Wat itself. This ballet consists of dancing girls, trained by a princess of the royal house (Cambodia is a Protectorate under the French, with its own nominal king), after the form and manner of the dancers of ancient Angkor. Their costumes are designed from original carvings, and made from lovely coloured brocades, overlaid with stiffened panels and shoulder pieces encrusted with sparkling embroideries and sequins, and the amazing gilded head-dresses are in the form of cupolas and minarets. The dancing itself is chiefly beautiful in its grace, and the movements of arms, hands, and feet; but, combined with these, there is the enacting of traditional legends relating to the Khmer kingdom.

Arriving at Angkor Wat after dark for this ballet, a fantastic scene met our astonished eyes. The great world of Angkor was swarming with excited Cambodian children, rushing wildly about with flaming torches made from chips of ironwood soaked in sweet oil. With these they guided us over the causeway to a circle of seats placed just below the Royal Porch. Its walls, of solid towers and cloisters loomed up out of the darkness, a strange grey-green like stormy seas; and on the central steps were grouped the dancers, their brilliantly coloured costumes in vivid contrast to the pale stone and the deep, coppery brown of the half-palmed children, lumbering up the pillars behind them.

A GREAT hunt is now on for better miles per gallon. Manufacturers are improving induction and carburettor systems, and the oil people have helped enormously by the introduction of lighter oils.

But despite all this, many car owners are wasting petrol—letting it drip away. Here is a tip from a practical engineer owner-driver. First ensure that the carburettor is properly set, that the right grade of oil is being used, and the ignition timing is correct.

Then put half a pint of engine oil in the petrol, run the car for 30 miles, then go over all the petrol unions (usually about half a dozen) from petrol tank to carburettor. Where there is an oil sealer indicates a "weeping" union. Tighten it up.

GAME OF HEARTS

Andre Valaire, who had just turned from the Brigard plantation where he had spent the afternoon riding with Froufrou. He entered the house, reached the great white house in which he lived, and hurried inside. He found his mother's study to find her bending over accounts at her desk.

"Hello, mamma," he called.

"I'm always busy," she answered severely. "If you waste moments, you waste the top of your head."

He kissed the top of her head and put his cheek to hers. "Something in your manner made me give him her full attention."

"Mamma," he announced solemnly.

"What is it?"

"I'm going to reform."

"I want to get married."

"You looked at him for a moment."

"Of course," she sighed. "I had to choose the right one. I wish it were the sensible one. I could have found no fault with him."

"Find none with Froufrou, mamma," he begged.

She took his face in her hands and kissed him. "You are a son."

He embraced her. "I'll ask her father if I may speak to her at the party tonight, he said, and with a goodbye kiss, made for his room to change.

In his room at the Brigard plantation, Georges sat at a dressing table, looking at his reflection in the mirror. He was being buttoned into his evening cloak by a negro servant. The door opened suddenly and Froufrou put in her head.

"Alone, Monsieur Georges?" she asked, and seeing him alone, entered the room.

"Do you like this dress?" she asked, and he replied with a smile. "I like it perfectly."

"Do you think so, really?" she asked breathlessly. "Do you think I have success in it? It is a pink one that might be better."

"Keep that on," he answered with utmost seriousness.

"What a comfort it is to have a gentleman decide important matters for one. Thank you, Monsieur," she turned to go. "Oh—there was something else—"

"Oh yes—this bracelet; I can't fasten it and I like it. Can you?"

She held up her arm.

"I can try," he smiled and, despite his late arm, managed to fasten the bracelet for her.

He turned to her for a moment the impulse to kiss her all but mastered him. "There," he said, controlling himself, and smiled off-handedly.

"I'm sure I shall have success in this dress tonight," she laughed, and with a rustle of silk, she was gone.

Georges turned to his servant. "Has Monsieur Brigard come down stairs yet?" he asked suddenly.

"Yes, m'sieur." The servant grinned knowingly. "If you all want to talk to him about something he's in his study."

"Thank you," Georges smiled and walked out with the purposeful step of a man who has arrived at a decision.

Up in her room, Louise was putting the finishing touches to her toilette. She hummed gaily, smiling happily at Suzanne, who was busy fastening her gown.

"All ye dresses has got too big for me," she said. "I'll have Monsieur Georges," grumbled Suzanne.

Louise hugged her out of sheer happiness.

"What gracious!" protested Suzanne. "If Ah hadn't heard every word that passed between you two, Ah'd think he'd already popped de question."

"Perhaps he would have," Louise reproached. "If you'd not been all ears and eyes every moment."

Suzanne looked at her adoringly. "Well, Ah's told you. He sure try to plead his cause! He sure try to read in your eyes de chapter."

"You'll not be tonight!" laughed Louise. "At last he'll be able to say a few words to me alone, before he goes tomorrow."

With a happy sigh, Louise left the room. She hurried down the stairs and reached the first landing as Georges Barriere came out of her father's study. She stopped short, had hand flying to her heart. "Mademoiselle!" called Georges. "Wait. I've something to say to you before anyone comes."

"Now?"

Louise lifted her radiant face. "Yes. I've just spoken to your father—and he's told me I may speak to you."

"You've spoken to him?" breathed Louise.

"Yes—I've spoken to him about Froufrou?" Louise stepped back as if struck.

"You didn't know it?" he asked in surprise.

"No, I didn't know it," she said tearlessly. She collected her pride. "But why speak to me? Why not to her?"

"Because your father hesitates to give his consent without your approval. He seems to think Froufrou and I are not suited to one another."

"I understand that," she answered drily. "Gilberto is frivolous—and you so serious."

"Too serious," he interrupted. "That's my fear. But he says you're to decide this. So my fate is in your hands, dear Louise. He leaned toward her pleadingly. "Do say that you approve!"

"I approve. I approve." She felt her voice break and struggled to master herself. "Yes—yes, of course. Why shouldn't I approve. You're the very person to cure Gilberto of his frivolity."

"Oh, no," he cried. "I wouldn't want to cure her. I like what you call her frivolity. It suits her."

"Shall I send her to you?" Louise asked.

"You beckoned. Louise—will you tell her? I'm—well, I'm frightened. How is a man to propose to a rainbow? She may laugh at the idea."

"Laugh?" Louise, with trembling effort, kept herself in hand. "How could she?" She thought hard. "Very well, I'll ask her for you."

She said finally and with a short nod, she started up the stairs.

In her room, Froufrou was admiring herself at her mirror. She was to her sister, "Louise," she called, "which do you like best with this dress, the rosebuds, or the seaweed?"

"Does it matter?" murmured Louise.

Froufrou faced her anxiously. "You're a look serious. What's happened?"

"Let Monsieur Georges tell you," Louise answered. "He's waiting for you in the study. He wishes to marry you. He's spoken to papa."

"Marry me?" cried Froufrou. "Monsieur Georges? O, Sainte Catherine has done this! I prayed for a husband and now she sends me Monsieur Georges?"

"Gibberto!" Louise cried out in anguish.

"It's so funny," giggled Froufrou. "Monsieur Georges who hasn't a fault to his name, wants to marry me—me—Froufrou! It would be different, if it were Monsieur Andre—I could understand that!"

"Perhaps," Louise said curtly. "But between the two, surely you can't hesitate! Even if you don't love Monsieur Georges now, you will learn to when he is your husband."

Froufrou stared at her with naive seriousness. "Yes, I admit that ought to be easy," she paused. "I'm—aren't you in love with him, yourself?"

"Do you think a woman in love with a man would ask another to marry him?"

"I wouldn't," Froufrou answered, "but you might."

"It happens, however, that he loves you and I love him. So one also—The Count de la Rochelle whom we met in Paris."

"Yes," smiled Froufrou. "that might be. Yes—he would be just your sort." She put her hands to her head. "Oh!" she laughed. "my heart is aching. I don't know what to say. I should like to be married and live in New Orleans, certainly. Monsieur Georges lives in New Orleans—but so does Monsieur Andre."

"Froufrou!" implored Louise. "Monsieur Georges is waiting for you now—outside—near the balcony—go to him—and with a quick kiss, she turned and fled."

Froufrou ran down the stairs to the balcony where Georges awaited her, something in her smile and manner made him know her answer. He lifted her hand to his lips, then, with a quick movement, he drew her into his arms and kissed her mouth.

As she lifted her arms to answer his embrace the door opened and Andre Valaire entered. For an instant he stared at the tableau before him, then, turning swiftly, he ran out of the house and throwing himself upon his horse, galloped out into the night.

Froufrou has given her word to Georges; what will become of Louise? Will Andre try to plead his cause? He sure try to read in your eyes de chapter.

WUHAN EVACUATION COMPLETED

Three Cities Blazing At Many Points

CHUNGKING, Oct. 26. IN ACCORDANCE with a pre-conceived plan Chinese forces completed their strategic withdrawal from the Wuhan cities yesterday.

All Chinese troops evacuated and said to have safely reached pre-arranged positions outside the Wuhan area, where they will continue to resist the Japanese invaders. The withdrawal is described as orderly and involving little loss.

Prior to the withdrawal, all government buildings, utility plants and structures of military significance, including the aerodrome, bridges and railway stations were dynamited by the Chinese.

Practically all able-bodied men were also evacuated from the Wuhan cities in order to prevent the Japanese from making use of them, whilst civilians who remain behind are placed in care of the Refugee Zone Committee.

The Wuhan cities were still ablaze last night. Huge fires licked skyward and explosions were audible from time to time.

125 AMERICANS AT HANKOW

Washington, Oct. 25. The United States Consul-General, Mr. Josselyn, has reported to the State Department that there are 125 Americans in the vicinity of Hankow, of which 82 are men, 36 women, and seven children, excluding the crews of the gunboats, Luzon and Guam.

In addition, there are 12 Filipinos at Hankow.—United Press.

HOW TOKYO HEARD THE NEWS

Tokyo, Oct. 25. The news of the entry of Japanese troops into Hankow was announced by the shrill whistling of sirens, and immediately afterwards special editions of the papers were distributed. The whole city is gay with bunting, while immense crowds are streaming in the direction of the Imperial Palace to pay distant homage to the Emperor.

A torchlight procession will take place this evening in which hundreds of thousands are expected to participate, and celebrations are being organized in all educational establishments throughout the country.—Trans-Ocean.

Duke Of Kent For Australia

Dominion's First Royal Governor General

LONDON, Oct. 25. IT IS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED that the Duke of Kent has been appointed Governor-General of Australia, in succession to Lord Gowrie, who has relinquished his appointment.

DUKE OF KENT

The Duke will go to Australia to take over his duties from Lord Gowrie in November, 1939.

"Reuter" learns that the Duchess will accompany her husband, and it is probable they will take the children.

This is the first occasion on which a King's brother has become Governor-General of Australia.

The Duke of Kent was at one time stationed in Hongkong, where he was in H.M.S. Hawkins.

TO STAY TWO OR THREE YEARS It is understood that the Duke and Duchess of Kent's stay in Australia will probably be limited to two or three years, because with the Duke in the Dominion, there will only be the Duke of Gloucester left in England to act as the King's deputy, and to fulfil official functions and engagements.—Reuter.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

London, Oct. 25. An official announcement from Buckingham Palace regarding the appointment of the Duke of Kent stated:

"The King has received from Lord Gowrie an intimation that he desires to relinquish his appointment as Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia in November, 1939.

"His Majesty has accepted the resignation with much regret. The King has been graciously pleased to approve the appointment of His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, as Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia in succession to Lord Gowrie."—Reuter.

HALIFAX'S SPEECH SATISFIES

French And German Press Comment

LONDON, Oct. 25. Qualified approval has greeted Lord Halifax's speech in both Berlin and Paris, but Germans have not yet been given the opportunity to read Lord Halifax's speech itself, since the official German News Agency issued only a condensed version of 100 words of the speech.

The Volkszeitung is the only newspaper printing another version of the speech, and it comments approvingly on Lord Halifax's "firm resistance to the fatalistic view that war is unavoidable."

The paper welcomes the fact that the "British Foreign Minister stood up so energetically for continuation of a peace policy, and warned opposing circles from Mr. Anthony Eden to Major Clement Attlee against meddling in other people's internal affairs."

The French newspaper, Ordre, while agreeing that Viscount Halifax's declarations are irreproachable from an idealistic standpoint, thinks they are much less so from that of reality. After expressing doubts regarding the peace desires of Germany and Italy, the paper adds: "Either we are greatly mistaken, or Lord Halifax's speech will have a result directly opposite to that he expects, the extension of Hitler's and Fascist claims, and giving the dictators the idea that real collaboration is that imposed by force."

The Figaro utters the warning that any Franco-German rapprochement arising from Hitler's reported offer to France of a non-aggression pact must not be allowed to drive a wedge between Britain and France.

Madame Tabouis in L'Ouvreur thinks that Lord Halifax's intentions were put forward as conditions for future negotiations, and declares that proposals are expected in London from Herr von Ribbentrop, and that immediately these are received by the British Cabinet, Herr von Neurath would go to London.—Reuter.

GOVERNMENTS MAIN OBJECTIVES

London, Oct. 25. Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in a message to the Government, said that the Government's main objective is to secure peace, and that the Government's main objective is to secure peace, and that the Government's main objective is to secure peace.

In support of these the Government requires the fullest possible measure of co-operation. A united effort will be needed if legitimate pride in the British democratic institutions is to be maintained and justified in the eyes of the world.—Reuter.

Anglo-Italian Agreement Appears Safe

London, Oct. 25. Negotiations between Count Ciano and the British Ambassador, Lord Perth, have, according to the Yorkshire Post, been so successful that there is every prospect of the Anglo-Italian agreement coming into force about the middle of November. It is expected that the question will be discussed by the Cabinet at its usual weekly meeting on Wednesday.—Trans-Ocean.

Kam Tin Total Declines As "Chinese Go Back"

The Kam Tin Refugee Camp inhabitants have considerably diminished during the past few days and after to-day, the number will be less than 100. The total that have passed through the camp since it was opened about a fortnight ago, is 3,100. Yesterday so many had returned to their villages or had been claimed by relatives that there were only 721 and of these, arrangements are being made, with the assistance of volunteer lorries, to transport 120 persons to Castle Peak from whence a ferry will take them to Po On District where they lived before the evacuation.

GOOD NEWS! For the "In-Betweens" New Frocks to Flatter You

NOT stock—yet not out-size, this was the worry of a reader who wrote to me complaining that she could never find a dress to fit.

Many women are stock fitting as far as bust and waist are concerned but their hip measurements are too large for frocks made with the usual sizes.

The patterned styles are specially designed to meet the needs of the in-between figure.

You are really in luck this season, as most of the fashion interest lies in the bodies of frocks, and it is by emphasising the top part of your dress where you can afford extra width that you get the slenderizing line needed in the skirt.

A nice warm wool frock for early winter is your first requirement—yokes, pockets and loose sleeves trimmed with a contrasting colour are all smart details that you can be original about on the bodies.

Youthful Style

It is an attractive little dress in the new blueberry shade, with a chrysanthemum red contrast trimming round the pockets, down the front and on the sleeves to make it gay. The skirt has a single inverted pleat in front.

Pockets give you the width you need across the figure and they are fastened with zippers; the same fastening is used down the front, making the dress an easy one to pop into when you are in a hurry.

These zippers are quite simple to add it trained. Skillful cutting, setting and finger modelling after a shampoo transforms a poor hairline if you begin early enough.

Super brushing

At least twice a week they have a super brushing. This is done by making a series of close partings and brushing in long, straight strokes well away from the scalp.

The back hair is brushed vigorously towards the front and the scalp and roots well aired. At regular intervals—about four times a year—my sister uses a tonic.

A few drops are shaken on to each parting and massaged in with a circular movement which loosens the scalp. A tight scalp is the beginning of serious hair troubles and can be prevented by proper brushing and simple massage.

Pretty tough

BRUSHING and an occasional tonic treatment will keep the natural oil glands active. An exception can be made in the case of very dry hair, which benefits from an oil bath just before a shampoo.

Scalp and hair should be saturated in warm, pure olive oil, left on for one night and then washed with shredded Castile or best green soap.

David—the baby—hates having his hair washed, brushed or "fussed." One day his father took him to a grown-up barber's and let him watch "real men" being shampooed and combed.

He thinks he's pretty tough now when he dips his red head in the bathroom basin.

Kilted Front

A dressy frock for social dates is shown in the other pattern, No. 1196. This has also been designed for the in-between figure. It has a dainty, kilted front to give width, and a bishop's sleeve to emphasise your small waist while the downward lines of skirt not only ensure a slim hip-line, but give flattering length of line to the figure below the waist.

Contrasts are an important fashion note, so a second colour has been introduced on the collar.

Juniper or beagle green are my choice for this dress, with an ecru or pasteltinted collar if you like a light colour next to your face, otherwise ecru or Chinese lacquer red give you an original combination.

Be A Quick Shopper

DO you, as a housewife, complain of never having a minute to yourself? If so, save time on the daily shopping. Methodical attention may give you a few hours extra leisure weekly.

Prepare for your expedition by writing down the names of shops to be visited and articles required. A convenient order is with the most distant shop put first. You then only carry things once, which saves fatigue.

The method of asking for goods is either a help or a hindrance. Don't fuss! State what you require clearly, asking for quantities first and leaving queries until afterwards. Neither you nor the assistant will then get muddled; this saves his time and patience too.

Tendering the exact money is always a help; but if this is impossible, ask for change at the place where you know much money is taken. Minutes pass quickly while waiting at smaller shops for change to be obtained.

Wait your turn quietly. Other people's time is as valuable as yours. The ordinarily observant shopkeeper will notice and serve you as soon as possible. On the other hand, never wait in a shop where you are deliberately ignored.

No good shopper stands talking on the pavement. It is inconsiderate to block the way of others who may be pressed for time. Friends all bent on the same errand will usually prefer a smile and cheery word in passing.

Carrying different sorts of commodities sensibly prevents waste of time in readjusting them on the homeward journey. Either have a stout piece of cardboard, forming a partition, in the centre of your basket, or take two carriers. One for meat and vegetables and the other for cleaner goods.

Above all, wear your most comfortable pair of shoes.

Marie Blanche

Salt Service

If a pinch of salt is added when stewing fruit, it brings out the full flavour.

It is not generally known that if new coloured garments are put into cold salt water for ten minutes before they are washed, this will fix the dye and prevent any likelihood of the colours running.

City dwellers will find that if curtains are steeped in salt water before washing, they will be much easier to wash, because salt removes the soot from them.

The task of scraping new potatoes is made much easier if a little salt is dissolved in the water.

Tenaciously very often become discoloured inside, but the stains can very easily be removed if they are rubbed with a damp cloth which has been dipped in salt. A little salt on a damp cloth will also remove the brown stains on egg spoons.

Eggs with thin shells often crack when being boiled, and most of the white is wasted; but if a teaspoonful of salt is sprinkled in the water, the whites will not come through the shells.

Fibre brushes will last much longer if they are steeped in a strong solution of salt and water, before using. This hardens the fibre, and lengthens their life considerably. Added a little salt to the water in which cut flowers are placed, and they will keep fresh.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on a carpet will prevent stains. If carpets are given an occasional "dry-clean" with salt they will come up like new, as salt revives the colours. Simply sprinkle salt on the carpet, and brush well. Carpets treated in this way always look fresh and new.

Ink stains are easy to remove if salt is put on the ink immediately it is spilt.

Salt will quickly put out a fire in the chimney. Throw a few handfuls of salt on the fire in the grate, and in a few minutes the trouble will be overcome.

My Sister's Family by Kathleen Allison

When I was young, it was penny straight or tuppence curly. In our pre-war nursery, wiry corkscrews or insignificant plaits did their worst by us.

Even when the scissors released us from the bondage of combs, slides and black ribbons, our coiffures remained singularly unbecoming.

Memories of her own "skinned rabbit" locks made my sister begin early on her daughter's hair. And she didn't forget her sons, either. The other day she had the satisfaction of hearing her Mary say:

"I like my hair to be smarty"

SMALL girls need their hair "styled" as much as their mothers. Very early in life Selina and Mary were taken to a hairdresser who has enough sense to give serious attention to his customers of the future.

He took one look at Selina and saw that she wasn't going to bother much. He tailored her head so that, however much she tossed it, none of her hair fell into her eyes.

He showed her—clever fellow—what hair looks like under a microscope, and sold her mother a good hairbrush.

A huge success

SELINA is, consequently, making her first attempts to titivate. She has experimented with plaits.

They suited her but were abandoned in favour of a demure middle parting, longish side pieces drawn to the back of the head and made into a single plait.

For school her hair has to be "tied back," but her mother refuses to plait out the waves. A bow at the nape of her neck, or two bows, one Selina's fast-growing vanity, and each side of her head, keeps her tidy enough to please her mother.

She goes to school with a neat, hipet-like slide at the end of her short pigtail; but for "best" she wears inch-wide ribbon tied in a neat, flat bow.

Short hair

MARY'S pliant little face looked insignificant with really short hair. She has that ash blonde colouring which can very easily look mousy and her face is really thin.

ALL the children possess two brushes and start each day—when they remember—with a clean one. Five minutes twice a day is my sister's allowance of brushing for each head. I must say the makes them shine like new straw. Because Mary's hair didn't grow becomingly on her forehead, she had

"SHE" enters. All eyes are upon her. On every lip the question "who is SHE?"

Immaculate from head to foot—styled to the minute—looking as if she had just come from the hair-dresser.

And then the secret is out. SHE only goes occasionally to the hair-dresser to have her wave set—her hair is modernized! A friend tells how particular she is to shampoo—regularly—at home.

And there's really no trick to it. Discriminating women know that Mulsified leaves the hair soft and easy to manage—preserves the wave—makes it sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

Women who know will tell you that the natural oils in Mulsified nourish the scalp—prevent its drying out. Free of harsh alkali Mulsified is safe even for baby's tender scalp.

structure, the funnel and a life-boat were holed by bomb splinters and two front cabins were wrecked.

In an interview which took place in one of the damaged cabins, the captain of the vessel, Lieut. Cmdr. W. E. J. Eames, told the representative that the Japanese attack could not have been carried out by mistake as the British ensign was painted distinctly on the superstructure.

The Japanese machines attacking the gunboat were flying at an altitude of about 4,000 feet and the airmen should have clearly observed the ensign at this height, he said.

Furthermore, he continued, the Sandpiper has been in Changsha for 18 months and her movements were communicated to the Japanese. It seems incredible, therefore, that her exact position should have been unknown to the Japanese.

ONLY REFUGEES NEARBY

The commander added that the attack was all the more unjustified as there were no Chinese military establishments nearby, but only junks carrying Chinese refugees.

He said that altogether 16 bombs were released by the Japanese airmen around the Sandpiper. The nearest landed only 15 yards from the bow and the second nearest 20 yards from the stern. Between 16 and 20 other missiles were dropped within 100 yards.

One British officer aboard the vessel had a narrow escape as a bomb splinter pierced through his cabin struck the tin helmet on his head.

Touring the Changsha bund, the representative found that over 10 bombs landed in the vicinity of a German firm.

One of the missiles nearly made a direct hit on a large Red Cross flag at the courtyard of the firm. Most of the window-panes of the building were shattered.

A French woman secretary was cut in the arm by shrapnel.—Central News.

ENQUIRY IS PROMISED

SHANGHAI, Oct. 26.
"Reuter" has been informed that the Japanese Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs called on Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador in Tokyo to convey to him expressions of deep regret of the Japanese Government regarding the bombing of H.M.S. Sandpiper, and at the same time the Minister gave him an assurance that a complete enquiry would be carried out forthwith.—Reuter.

"If you were alone: why were there so many cigarette ends in your room?"

HE said

"For the very good reason, my dear, that I had a brand new box of du Maurier. Here! There's one left. You have it."

"Oh... those cigarettes with the cunning filter tips? Thanks, I'd like to!"

"There! See what I mean? Rather special aren't they? And no tell-tale tongue afterwards—however many you smoke!"

Pretoria, Oct. 25.

A proposal to enable the authorities to deal more effectively with the propaganda is believed to have been discussed to-day during a long interview between General Hertzog and Mr. Conradie, the South-West Africa Administrator.

After leaving General Hertzog, Mr. Conradie told Reuters that the Union section in South-West Africa was seriously perturbed by the confident tone of the German population in South-West Africa, which had become increasingly loud since the Munich agreement. The Union section, however, was still unconvincedly hostile to deal with Germany.

It is believed General Hertzog assured the Administrator that the Union Government had no intention of relinquishing the mandate. The question of South-West Africa's defences was also discussed.—Reuters.

OLD WANTS OLD COLONIES

Berlin, Oct. 26.

Germany is interested only in the colonies which were taken from her following the war. It is emphasised here in political circles, in connection with the comments on the article to the effect that the Reich demands from England, France and Belgium the return of Togoland, Cameroons, South-west Africa and Tanganyika, that if the present conditions make a complete return impossible the Reich Government is willing to accept compensation in form of other colonies in Africa. This and other similar speculations in the British papers are characterised as pure nonsense, particularly by the reference to Belgian Congo and Portuguese Angola.

Political circles also call attention to the fact that certain British circles are making repeated offers of colonies to Germany but in every case those that belong to a country other than England. The question is asked whether the groups hope to accustom Germany to the idea of accepting substitute colonies.

Germany, it is declared, is not interested in a colonial restitution at the cost of third Powers and could not be expected to respond to such overtures.—Trans-Ocean.

CEMENT IMPORTED

Cebu Firm's Purchases To Meet Local Demand

The importation of 450,000 bags of cement, 350,000 from Japan and 100,000 from the United States, in order to force the price of cement down and maintain it at a reasonable level until the Cebu Portland cement manufacture enough to meet local demand, was announced by the board of directors of the Cebu Portland Cement Company, says the Manila Bulletin.

Mr. Gregorio Anonas, manager of the Cebu Portland, declared that as a result of this meeting of the local firm, the price of cement fell from P2.40 and P2.50, retail, to P1.60. The Cebu firm had to use some P430,000 of its funds to finance the transactions. It is understood, with a little bit of profit for its trouble.

The Cebu firm is constructing an additional plant, equal in capacity to the old plant. It will be completed next February. The two plants are expected to turn out enough to meet local demand.

A VARIETY CONCERT

University Function For War Relief Funds

Further aid for the Chinese Medical Relief Association is planned by the Hongkong University Women Undergraduates' Club in their presentation of a Variety Concert in the University Great Hall on Saturday, October 29, commencing at 8.45 p.m.

Three short plays are being presented. The first is in French entitled "L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle"; the second in Mandarin called "A Woman's Patriotism"; and the third in English titled "The Stepmother." The plays will be interpreted by piano solos—Le Rossignol played by Miss Yu Man-sang, and Polichinelle (Rachmaninoff) played by Miss So Man-yue.

Advance sales of tickets are exceeding all anticipations. A school performance, which was to have been held on Friday evening, has now been cancelled. Letters were sent to 32 schools, but only three replies were received.

THREE ARABS SHOT FOR SABOTAGE

Jerusalem, Oct. 25. The military authorities to-day executed three Arabs, convicted of sabotage.

Widespread violence continued to-day, while the military authorities tightened travelling restrictions. Meanwhile over 100 inmates in a Jewish concentration camp have threatened to stage a hunger strike unless they are transferred to the Jewish area.—United Press.

NOT ENOUGH

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Palestine, partitioned and truncated is not enough to solve the torments of the Jews, declared Lord Rothschild, speaking at a demonstration at Friends House, Euston Road, in connection with the "Palestine Week." He declared that when the Balfour Declaration was made no one dreamt of what was coming to the Jews, and there must be additional help from what is still the two most powerful and most just countries in the world, Britain and the United States.

Millions of innocents must not be exterminated for fun. These two countries, however, may not be able to take increased numbers of refugees themselves. Palestine cannot be a national home for all persecuted Jews. The future of the Jews in the world is a difficult problem, but I know it will be solved, declared Lord Rothschild.

Mr. Herbert Morrison criticised the weakness of the British administration in Palestine and said the British Government should facilitate Jewish immigration. There was no fundamental need for conflict between Arabs and Jews, and he urged the prevention of externally inspired disorder and the illicit smuggling of arms.—Reuters.

ARAB VILLAGES FINED

Jerusalem, Oct. 25. Collective fines of varying amounts have been imposed on a large number of Arab villages in northern Palestine for recent sabotage to roads and telephone communications.

The situation in Jerusalem is quieter.—Reuters.

SOLUTION FOR PROBLEMS

Cairo, Oct. 25. France and England intend to solve "the acute Arab questions" according to a plan which has already been drawn up, it is declared. The Arab problems are the Franco-Syrian controversy, the Palestine question and the Sanjak dispute. The aim of the two mandate countries is to stabilize the situation in the Near East for a long period it is said.

Following the report of the Woodhead Commission, the partitioning project has been abandoned, and Jewish immigration is to be halted. By these measures the British Government hopes to appease the Arabs and to bring about order in the country until new positive proposals can be drawn up and passed.

These proposals will undoubtedly be favourable to the Arabs, as England has indicated her intentions to come to an understanding with them. The Syrian problem will be considered and solved in connection with that of Palestine, it is stated.—Trans-Ocean.

LOCAL AGRICULTURE

Suggested Increase In Vegetable Culture

At a meeting of the Committee of the New Territories Agricultural Association held on Saturday last, at Joseph Hall, Fanling, a gift of $2,000 by Sir Robert and Lady Ho Tung for the funds of the Association was announced, and the subject of investment of this fund was discussed. It was also stated that Mr. Joseph's local representative had visited the premises with a view to observe the proposed site for erection of permanent show sheds. The plan as displayed was approved by the Committee, as in general meeting with their views.

Suggestions were made as to the use of the Association's land to produce Chinese vegetables to assist in meeting Hongkong's present need, and to urge farmers to grow more vegetables.

Arrangements were made to prepare for the Agricultural Show to be held on January 7 and 8, 1939. Improved methods of controlling the funds of the Association were also discussed.

Berlin, Oct. 25.
Konrad Henlein has been promoted to the rank of major in the Reserve of the German army, the Commander-in-Chief, General von Brauchitsch, having conferred the commission on the Sudeten leader to-day.

In a personal message to Herr Henlein General von Brauchitsch lauded his services and deep understanding of the tasks different from the army departments as evidenced during the occupation of the Sudetenland. He has been assigned to the Infantry Regiment 52 in Bautzen, the commission to become effective on November 1.—Trans-Ocean.

GERMANY AND HER COLONIES

S. African Minister May See Hitler

MARSEILLES, Oct. 25.
Mr. Pirow, Defence Minister for South Africa, who is on an important mission in connection with the colonial issue, arrived here this morning from East Africa, and left immediately by a German plane for Lisbon.

In an interview Mr. Pirow stated that he would discuss with the Portuguese Government the question of former German colonies, after which he was going to London for the purpose of informing the British Government of the result of the conversations.

He added that it was not impossible that he might decide to go to Germany to discuss the question with Herr Hitler, before returning to South Africa.—Reuter.

Czechs Refuse To Cede 25 Ruthenian Villages To Nearby Neighbours

PRAGUE, Oct. 25.

AFTER deliberating for eight hours, the Czechoslovak Government decided to submit the Czech-Hungarian dispute to an Italo-German jury.

The Hungarian counter-proposals were subject to exhaustive discussion of the Council of Ministers under the Chairmanship of Premier Syrový and with attendance of Slovak and Ruthenian Ministers.

The official communiqué merely states that the Foreign Minister, Dr. Chvalkovský, will hand the Czech answer to the Hungarian Minister to Prague. Further details will only be made known after the answer is in the hands of the Hungarian Government.

Informed quarters, however, state that the Hungarian proposals are considered unacceptable and that the new frontier proposed for Carpatho-Ruthenia would give Hungary 25 purely Ruthenian villages.

It is rumoured that the Czechoslovak Government would be willing to cede the Berehovo district to Hungary but not the Ruthenian districts of Solush, Mukacz and Uhrozd.

Deeming direct negotiations impossible, the Czechoslovak Government has accepted the Hungarian alternative of submitting the dispute to a German Italian jury. Should Hungary demand that Poland be present, Czechoslovakia will insist upon Rumanian participation. The presence of France or England has not been asked for by either party.—Trans-Ocean.

BULGARIA TO BUILD ARMAMENTS

Sofia, Oct. 25.
The National Assembly has unanimously voted £8,000,000 for armaments, showing that the Bulgarians are united firmly in supporting the King and his army.—Reuter.

RECALLING RESERVISTS

Prague, Oct. 25.
The authorities have recalled an unknown number of Czech reservists "specialists." It is emphasized that half the number recalled during the crisis will continue to be armed.

Despite Government optimism that there will be a peaceful settlement with Hungary, it is revealed that more than 100 have been killed and between 300 and 500 wounded and arrested in Ruthenian disorders.

The Government appears to be calm, confident that Herr Hitler will intervene to prevent trouble with Hungary.

Meanwhile from Bratislava comes a message that the Slovak Premier, Dr. Tiso, has gone to Prague to discuss the Hungarian plebiscite proposals.

Before his departure he spoke to the press, and said: "There is reason to believe that Herr Hitler is sympathetic to the Slovakia plans for settlement of the border dispute."—United Press.

CZECH PLANE ATTACKED

Prague, Oct. 25.
It is alleged here that a Czech military plane was attacked, and brought down in flames this afternoon, by two Hungarian pursuit planes.

The pilot was wounded, and the plane fell seven and a half miles within the Czech frontier.

Belgrade, Oct. 25.
The Yugo-Slav-Germany commercial treaty is scheduled to be signed to-day.

Under the agreement the Reich will absorb approximately 60 per cent. of Yugo-Slav exports. German imports from Yugo-Slavavia cannot exceed Yugo-Slav imports from Germany.—United Press.

Britons Say They Were Whipped

London, Oct. 25.
There were touching re-unions when 40 members of the International Brigade, prisoners released by General Franco under the exchange scheme, arrived at Victoria Station to-day.

Several told stories of bitter treatment, and said they were often beaten with sticks, and sometimes stood against a wall and shaved with whips. No medical treatment was given until some time before the exchange was made.

The contingent were met on arrival by representatives of the London Communist Party.—Reuter.

REPLY TO HUNGARY

Prague, Oct. 25.
It is officially announced that the Cabinet has laid down the basis for a resumption of negotiations regarding the new Hungarian frontier.

The reply will be sent to Hungary on October 26, and until then its contents will not be published.

Another Prague message says that the Government has decided to admit free of duty, merchandise of Sudeten origin into Czechoslovakia territory.—United Press.

£255,000 TO AID CZECH REFUGEES

London, Oct. 25.
The Lord Mayor's Fund for the relief of Czech refugees amounts to £255,000.

Sir Ronald MacLeay, for many years British Minister at Prague, is going to Prague to administer the fund on behalf of the Lord Mayor.—Reuter.

LIVELY CHILE ELECTION

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 25.
Troops are standing-by in barracks prepared for emergencies. So far 26 people have been wounded and many arrested in connection with the national elections.

At San Antonio, Raul Brannas, vice-President of the Radical Party has been stabbed, and it is reported that in many towns left-wing partisans used tear-gas on right-wing voters at the polls.—United Press.

SUB-CONTRACTING TO SPEED UP ARMAMENTS

London, Oct. 25.
Sub-contracting as the method of overcoming the shortage of skilled labour for armament work in particular districts, was mentioned by Sir Charles Craven, Chairman of Vickers-Armstrongs at Barrow-in-Furness, after the launch of a submarine of the "U" Class.

Mrs. Layton, wife of Rear-Admiral Geoffrey Layton, Commanding the Battle Cruiser Squadron, named new submarine Thistle. Thistle is the third of six submarines on order with Vickers-Armstrongs for construction at Barrow, and is the 17th submarine launched from that yard.

Sir Charles Craven said advantage of sub-contracting in relation to skilled labour shortage was that it obviated up-rooting workers and their families and brought work to their own areas.—British Wireless.

PRINCE CHICHIBU RETURNS HOME

Tokyo, Oct. 25.
Prince Chichibu, younger brother of the Emperor of Japan who participated in the successful offensive on Canton, left Formosa by aeroplane at 7 o'clock this morning en route back to Tokyo.

His Highness will arrive at the Haneda Airport at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the Army Department of the Imperial Headquarters announced at 10.30 this morning.—Domei.

Grumbled At Sentence Gets More!

As he was leaving the dock at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday after having been sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. K. M. A. Barnett on a charge of assault, a man named Kong Kan, 27, was heard to grumble loudly. He was recalled by Mr. Barnett and was given a further five days' hard labour for this apparent show of dissatisfaction.

Kong was alleged to have assaulted a scavenging coolie, named Chan Shum, 28, by throwing pepper on him at Sha Po Road, Kowloon, on October 20. He denied the charge.

Sub-Inspector A. J. Johnson, who prosecuted, said that on October 20, Chan and three other coolies were sitting on a sidewalk at Sha Po Road, waiting for a scavenging department van to pick them up, when the defendant was alleged to have thrown some substance on the head of Chan. The defendant was detained by the coolies and was taken to the Kowloon City Police Station, where it was discovered that the substance on Chan's head and face was pepper.

Giving evidence, Chan said that he was sitting down on the outer edge of the sidewalk (lying a shoe lace that had come undone when he suddenly felt a hand, which held a packet of something, clasp his forehead. Immediately he called out "save me," and in answer to this appeal his folks arrested the defendant. He could only open his eyes slightly when he was on his way to the Kowloon City Police Station, from where he was taken to the Kowloon Hospital to have his eyes washed.

Testifying, Sub-Inspector Johnson said that on receiving a complaint from Chan at the Kowloon City Police Station on the day of the alleged incident, he searched the defendant's jacket pockets and found in one of them a substance which was the same as that which was on Chan's head and forehead. That substance was pepper.

Accused's Denial

Asked if he wished to give evidence, the defendant stated: "I have nothing to say. They accuse me but I say that it was not me. The pepper in my pocket was bought by me for the use of my household. I did not know how the pepper got into the complainant's eyes."

Mr. Barnett: "It is quite obvious that you are a liar. There is ample evidence that you threw the pepper in his face. I cannot understand why you should do a stupid thing like this."

Mr. Barnett then remarked to Sub-Inspector Johnson that the incident might have done a good deal of harm to the complainant as he might have lost his sight.

Before sentencing the defendant to one month's hard labour and ordering him to pay $1 amends into Court on behalf of the complainant, Mr. Barnett warned the defendant against any similar act. Mr. Barnett also pointed out that the assault was of an aggravated nature.

The defendant then left the dock grumbling, and was called back by Mr. Barnett and sentenced to a further five days' hard labour.

He had been missing since September 1. Death is believed to have been due to poisoning.

Jeffery, a native of Torquay, founded the West Country Association in Southland and was its president for many years.

On Fire!

Here is the Hamburg-American Line Deutschland, which yesterday afternoon sent out an S.O.S., that she was on fire. Later the blaze was reported to be under control. Full story is below.

BIG LINER AFIRE, BUT BLAZE NOW UNDER CONTROL

THE famous Hamburg-American Line trans-Atlantic liner, Deutschland, carrying nearly 600 passengers and a crew of 369, yesterday reported that she was afire off Newfoundland, and in danger. Half a dozen ships in the vicinity immediately changed courses to answer the distress signals, but later it was reported that the blaze was under control. The full cabled story follows.

New York, Oct. 25.
The Hamburg-American liner, Deutschland, 200 miles south-east of Cape Race off Newfoundland, is in distress.

She has signalled that a fire aboard is becoming "dangerous," and that help is necessary and urgent. There are 591 passengers aboard.

Company officials told the press the ship is equipped with the most modern apparatus, with fire-proof bulkheads, and they are confident of the officers' ability to keep the fire under control.

Meanwhile ships raced under forced draft en route to aid the liner, including the Norwegian s.s. Europa, the United States liner, Manhattan, and the American Farmer and America Trader s.s. Collamer.

The Europa is 75 miles from the Deutschland, steaming at 12 knots.—United Press.

New York, Oct. 25.
According to New York officials of the Hamburg-American Line, there are about 1,000 persons aboard the Deutschland, which is on fire.

It is now reported that half a dozen ships are racing to render assistance.—Reuter.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 25.
The coast guard authorities have ordered the cutter, Cayuga, at present somewhere off Cape Sable, to rush to the aid of the Deutschland.—United Press.

Britain Again Makes Default On War Debts

London, Oct. 25.

It is understood that Britain, on September 15, politely re-informed the United States that she was unable to pay the £120,000,000 instalment on the War Debts, despite recent rumours that the text of the settlement was interwoven with the trade pact talks.

The official British attitude is that Britain will confer with the United States, if and when there is a reasonable likelihood of the debt being trimmed to meet present circumstances, and secondly in the event of a settlement forming part of a world-wide readjustment of international indebtedness.

However, it is unofficially stated that a considerable section of the country is dissatisfied with the present position.

In the meantime, a message from Washington states that Administration officials are very concerned with the failure of the Pound sterling to recover the losses experienced in the crisis. They feel that it gives Britain an important trade advantage over the United States.

An official, in a statement to the United Press, said: "Naturally we are disappointed at the failure of the Pound to make a recovery more than it has." He drew attention to the fact that its present level makes it three per cent. dearer for Britain to buy American goods, and it is much cheaper for Americans to buy British goods. Secondly there were numerous countries with their currencies pegged to the Pound, thus making it advantageous to buy British.

Officials are concerned that the cheaper Pound will disturb the use of U.S. exports at a time when recovery appears to have begun.—United Press.

THERE CAN BE VICTORY IN DISASTER

The Chinese people will need all the moral support their friends can give to withstand the second disaster that has overtaken their country in less than a week, for morale and confidence necessarily must be badly shaken by the successive losses of Canton and Hankow, in peace-time the two largest cities in the country except Shanghai.

Chinese newspapers are probably much better adapted than British journals to telling the masses that the withdrawal from the Wuhan area was inevitable; that to fight in Hankow would have hurt China much more than Japan; that Chinese leaders, including Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, predicted early this year that the Japanese entry would be effected before July. That it is the tenth and not the seventh month of the year in which the Japanese can claim that they have reached their objective seems no cause for despondency on the part of the Chinese. They have made a gallant and impossible stand for the three cities when it would have been easy, and probably not much less fruitful, to draw the Japanese further into the hinterland. The story of Tehan is one that should be immortalised by China's historians of the future, for to the gallant defenders of this obscure and previously unknown village goes the honour of immobilising practically the entire might of Japan for three months.

China, reeling under two successive blows, temporarily is like a punch-drunk boxer. But with the withdrawal from Hankow and the taking up of new lines in more favourable terrain, she has gained a breathing spell for the next round. For Japan there is no such breathing spell.
Entry into a city, even a city of the size and richness of Canton and Hankow (the riches of both cities, incidentally, have disappeared in the hour of the invaders' victory) does not end or relax the terrific strain under which she is conducting this war of aggression.

China, it should be reiterated,

TO-DAY a new generation of Etonians will hear about the Iron Duke.

Perhaps in these troubled times it is good that they should hear tell of a strong Irishman.

The Duke of Wellington did Eton College great injury when, in a fit of generosity, he said, "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton."

Few believed this fantastic statement, few would have remembered it to this day if it were not the custom for every young Etonian to be told by the school authorities of the duke's foolish remark.

Since this evil day Etonians have regarded themselves as the mainstay of the Army officer class, and the public have regarded Etonians with both distrust and suspicion.

THE public are biased at once by the clothes that Etonians wear. "The top hat and tail coat for boys from the age of twelve upwards is ridiculous."

"Is that school trying to educate the sons of the rich into effeminate foes?" That's what is said.

A century ago that would be a true statement. Eton was trying to educate its scholars into being little gentlemen and to wearing the same clothes as daddy.

Now, however, there is a better reason for keeping the Etonian uniform.

The headmaster of Eton, if he were questioned as to why he did not dress Etonians in clothes suitable to boys young in years, would probably answer: "Convicts are dressed in loud-striped overalls so that they can easily be seen when they escape. We can easily follow the top hat of an Etonian if he breaks bounds."

So rather pity the Etonian. His top hat and tail coat worry him more than you.

It is not easy to get your son dressed in a top hat and tail coat.
It is expensive, too. To send a boy to Eton it is necessary to inscribe is more able to withstand the attacks of Japan's mechanised units and aeroplanes than Japan is able to withstand the attacks on her financial and economic structure. China's reverses are blazoned on the front pages of the world's newspapers; Japan's reverses, because of their insidiousness and because they are really known only to the financial leaders of the country, are seldom or never mentioned.

Nevertheless, of the two, they are probably the greater. It becomes a question of which will crack up first under the strain.
If China's morale remains firm;
if the Chinese people continue to give unwavering support to the leaders who have led them for fifteen months, no nation on earth can conquer this great country which is our neighbour.

HOW DO YOU PRAY?

MANY of us have started to pray again for the first time, perhaps since we were children. And we don't find it easy. We flop down on our knees and say, "O, God, please let there be peace in the world, and if there must be war, don't let them kill me and my family."

A petition like that is not really a prayer, but a wish, and, when you come to think of it, rather a selfish one. Why should you in particular be exempt from danger?

Those who get up from their knees after a prayer like that probably feel,
"Well, now I've asked God to do it what I want. If He doesn't do it I shall feel that He doesn't exist and that it is no good praying."

This frame of mind leaves such people very much where they were before they started praying, in a state of despairing half-belief. It is reducing God to the level of a lucky mascot.

All the same, half the battle is won by the willingness of people to trust something more than just clever wits and material strength.

The most encouraging signs recently have been those of the public distaste for war. The question is:
When you pray to God, what ought you to pray about?

The first thing for you to do is to acknowledge the existence of Evil.
This should not be difficult. The dogs of war have rather barked their way into prominence recently.

The next thing is to remember that it is not for you to condemn any human being as wholly evil. You are not to pray for the destruction of those of whom you disapprove. God will destroy them, in the end, if they ought to be destroyed. God always triumphs over evil, because He is all-powerful and evil is only negative.

BUT God has more time to work
His will than our short lives.
Even Communists or dictators or Conservatives or whoever they may be whom you personally dislike must one day die.

But you can work against the will of God and assist evil and war by wishing destruction of people rather than of things. So when you pray, pray for justice, right and grace.

JUSTICE for all in the decisions which are being made to-day, not the sort of justice that was made at Versailles, but divine justice.

Right triumphs over wrong.
Grace working in the hearts of all men, to bring about the triumph of good over evil.

And here you can dedicate yourself to God, to let Him use you as He wills. In this way, even if the prayers of the faithful cannot avert a war, you will be submitting yourself to the will of God and He will tell you what to do.

And if you want words in which to express all this and more, you will find them in the Lord's Prayer.

his name on the school roll at birth.
Then the parent must name which house he desires his son to go to.
Then, twelve years after the birth of the child, an entrance examination has to be taken.

Before the examination the parents must decide whether they wish their son to attempt a scholarship or to be an Oppidan.

THERE are many advantages if your son is clever enough to take a scholarship. His fees will be halved. Instead of his education costing £200 per annum it will cost £100.

If a boy passes the scholarship he has the right to put K.S. after his name; that means King's Scholar.
He will then live in "college" among seventy other scholars.

If your son is not so bright as that you decide that he should become an Oppidan. He will then take a simpler exam, and if he passes will go to one of the twenty-eight houses. Each house has about forty boys in it.

However, a boy who goes to a house always looks down on the scholar. He will call the scholar by the derogatory name of Tug.
There are twelve hundred boys at Eton. But it would be an error to think that they are pampered with luxury and care. An Eton boy has less luxury than the ordinary boy who attends a council school. In winter the Etonian has first of all to resist the cold, damp Thames Valley climate.

AT 7.25 a.m. weather wet or fine, the young Etonian will attend early school. To get to his classroom he may have to walk a mile. And he will not be given breakfast until 8.30.

After his breakfast you would think that he would be able to sit in a warm room in his house, especially in winter. No, this comfort is denied to him because none of the Eton houses has central heating.

Each student has his own bed-sitting-room. There is a fireplace in every room. But no boy is allowed to light a fire in his room before twelve noon. For the whole day an Etonian is given one small scuttie of coal.

Not every day, however, but four times a week only. When I was at Eton I endured cold for three days in the week. However, I looked forward to the limited amount of coal I was given by my housemaster for the remainder of the week.

Eton refuses to install central heating in the houses, although it has done so in the schoolrooms. The housemaster must not be blamed for giving the forty students in his house a limited amount of coal.

For the living of housemaster depends upon the money he can amass out of his house. Each house-master receives £80 per year per boy.

He has the boys in his house for eight months per year. Out of this
house, feed the boys, provide servants and heat and maintain the house.

AN Etonian, when he first goes to Eton, has to fog.
The first six to ten boys will be able to order the new arrivals to run errands for them. A young boy will have to be a fog from one to two years, according to how well he passed his original entrance examination.

Discipline in the house is maintained by the first five or six senior persons of the house. If a boy misbehaves the captain of the house has a right to beat him.

The permission of the house-master, or tutor as he is called at Eton, is as a rule asked before the culprit is punished. A boy can only be punished for house offences by the captain of the house.

If a boy does badly at his work he comes before the headmaster. The form master will complain to the headmaster that Mr. So-and-So is idle and should be flogged.

The headmaster then sends for the boy, and puts him on a white ticket. He is on a white ticket for ten days.

At the end of that time he must obtain the signatures of all his form masters on the ticket to say that his work has improved. If one of his form masters should fail to sign, the boy is summoned to the headmaster and is flogged with a birch.

Flogging at Eton is carried out with pomp and ceremony. The boy to be flogged is made to kneel on a block, with his trousers down, a gentleman called a fussee then sits on the unfortunate's head, and one of the senior boys hands the birch to the headmaster. And the flogging marches on.

It is considered a great disgrace to be flogged by the headmaster. When I was at Eton the heavy hand of Dr.
Aldington, now Dean of Durham, was much feared. I never experienced the chastisement of the Dean of Durham.

HOWEVER, I once came near to it. I was before him for some offence to which I pleaded ignorance.

Said Dr. Aldington: "You are either a fool or a knave. If I consider you to be a knave I shall flog you."

I quickly explained to Dr. Aldington that I was a fool. To my intense relief he agreed that I was a fool.

Eton provides a good education.
When a boy first goes there he has to work about ten hours a day. When he gets older the volume of work is reduced, no doubt to accustom many to the life which they will live after they have left "dear mother Eton."

Etonians leave the school from the ages of seventeen to nineteen. Many Etonians go to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and later the Army. Others go to the universities, and others enter business.

When an Etonian leaves the headmaster bids him farewell and hands him a copy of Gray's "Elegy." The gift of this book is very important to an Etonian, for it shows that he left Eton in honourable circumstances, and was not dismissed.

THE name of the departed Etonian will be carved on the panels of Upper School, where Pitt once studied. Pitt started this one of the shutters of Upper School.
Etonians do this because they can then say, "I went to the same school as William Pitt."

What happens to Etonians? Some go to jail, some to the House of Commons as Tories, some become good ministers, some become night club proprietors, some generals, some stockbrokers, and others do nothing but live in the memory that they were once Etonians, and hold high the flag of black and blue.

CHINA RE-FORMS LINE AS JAPANESE OCCUPY BURNING WUHAN CITY

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF PEACE UNTIL CHINA'S SOVEREIGNTY AND TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY ARE RESTORED.

China long ago prepared for the loss of both Canton and Hankow, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek warned the people as long ago as March that they must be prepared for the loss of the cities.

This is part of a semi-official statement issued in Chungking, the war capital, last night.

Officially, it is stated that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is with his troops, now taking up strong positions south-west of Hankow.

He has no intention of resigning or of making peace overtures with Japan.

The semi-official announcement from Chungking states that China's national policy since the beginning of the war has remained unaltered. It will be followed in the future, no matter how grave the situation becomes.

"So long as China's sovereignty and territorial integrity are not restored, the war of resistance with the aggressor will not be abandoned."

"Under present conditions, there is no basis for mediation by Third Powers."

In an editorial this morning the Central Daily News, official Chungking organ of the National Government, reminds the Chinese people that the National Government will not in any circumstances deviate from its pre-determined policy, or show hesitancy or misgivings in its execution.

CHIANG'S PREDICTION

In this instance, it is recalled that in an exclusive interview with the Hongkong "Telegraph" last May, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek warned China that it must be prepared for the loss of Hankow within three months.

The Japanese entry into the Wuhan cities was prolonged to October by the determined resistance of the Chinese troops who, considering all the disadvantages under which they fought, apparently surprised even their own leaders with the tenacity.

VOLUNTARY ABANDONMENT

Hankow, Oct. 25. The official spokesman of the Military Affairs Commission declared today that the Chinese Army has made preparations for the voluntary abandonment of the Wuhan nucleus in its war operations.

The spokesman said new plans for continuing the present war have been mapped out, and the enemy advance will be dealt with accordingly.

The spokesman emphasized that this decision is a necessary step in the Chinese strategy of re-aligning its military strength, and absolutely does not spell negative retreat.

Questioned as to the highlights of the new Chinese military plan, the spokesman declined to commit himself, pointing out that these touch upon military secrets which he could not reveal.

The spokesman explained that in mapping out a general plan for her military operations, China will take into consideration, aside from the necessity of exacting the highest toll from the enemy, the most effective means of preserving and strengthening her resisting power for prolonging the war.

In the past six months, he continued, China has indicated a heavy toll on the enemy and thus obtained her objective of wearing out the invader's strength.

The important significance of the defence of Wuhan, the spokesman said, is not so much the safeguarding of the tri-cities themselves from enemy invasion as the protection of the whole man-power and material resources of southeastern and central China in their removal north-westward to ensure a firm foundation for a drawn-out war.

This great exodus of China's resources has now completed, and with its completion the tri-cities of Wuhan have lost their importance from a general point of view in the nation's resistance scheme against Japan, he pointed out.

The spokesman stated that throughout the course of the present war, it has been China's aim always to force her own initiative on the Japanese. Now that the great objective of defending Wuhan has been attained, the Chinese army could see no reason why they should stick to the place and wait to be evacuated by the encroaching enemy.

Humanitarian considerations, furthermore, heavily weigh in on this step. If the Chinese army were to remain, the large numbers of helpless women and children who have not had the chance to evacuate would be plunged into the direct horrors of war, the spokesman said.

The important point to note is, the spokesman stressed, is this Chinese decision, far from a negative retreat, is in fact positive evidence of the nation's determination to prolong the struggle.—Central News.

Many Points

CHUNGKING, Oct. 26. IN ACCORDANCE with a pre-conceived plan Chinese forces completed their strategic withdrawal from the Wuhan cities yesterday.

All Chinese troops evacuated are said to have safely reached pre-arranged positions outside the Wuhan area, where they will continue to resist the Japanese invaders. The withdrawal is described as orderly and involving little loss.

Prior to the withdrawal, all government buildings, utility plants and structures of military significance, including the aerodrome, bridges and railway stations were dynamited by the Chinese.

Practically all able-bodied men were also evacuated from the Wuhan cities in order to prevent the Japanese from making use of them, whilst civilians who remain behind are placed in care of the Refugee Zone Committee.

The Wuhan cities were still ablaze last night. Huge fires licked skyward and explosions were audible from time to time.—Central News.

TEAM SPIRIT CARRIES VISITORS THROUGH

(By "Abe")

To say that the form revealed by the Hongkong Interport bowls rinks in the recent matches against Shanghai was disappointing is but to express mildly the feelings of those who had such great faith in the players selected to do duty for the Colony.

Shanghai won the 1938 series without any undue trouble, annexing the second and third Interports after the first had been adjudged a tie. The results of each match were:—First Interport, 20-20; Second Interport, Shanghai won by 30-10; and Third Interport, Shanghai won by 20-17.

Except, to a certain extent, for the rink which opposed Shanghai in the first match at Kowloon Docks, neither rink in the second or third did themselves justice.

Of the four men in the opening game, only A. R. Dallas and, in a lesser degree, B. W. Bradbury distinguished themselves. A. E. Coates, at No. 1, failed to reach his usual high standard, while J. McKelvie was absolutely off colour and did little right.

ONLY ONE SHINES

In the second game, only H. A. Alves accomplished anything of note. The other three members of the rink, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher and J. Hollidge (skip) were very poor. It is rather late in the day to criticise the positioning of the players; but it does appear significant, though, that the only man of the four who did well, H. A. Alves, was the one who had had Interport experience.

With three men playing on their own green in the Hongkong rink, it was expected—and rightly so—that the local men would have the advantage in the third game on the Club de Recreio green. But once again those who were playing on a green they knew well proved the greatest disappointments. It was left to U. M. Omar, the skip, to play the best game of the four.

It will thus be seen that of the six now caps, A. R. Dallas, L. F. Xavier, E. C. Fincher, J. Hollidge, F. X. M. da Silva and J. A. da Luz, only Dallas can be said to have justified his inclusion.

Let me be misunderstood, however, let me hasten to add that there was, in my opinion, little wrong with the actual selections of the players; it was only in the play that the local representatives let their selectors down.

NOT BETTER PLAYERS

Even now, after all three Interport matches have already been decided, I cannot understand why Shanghai won so easily. I have followed the visitors around in their matches with the various clubs, and I find it difficult to believe that they are so much better than our three rinks. Admittedly in Hugh Wallace, they have a skip who would be difficult to beat in any company; he revealed sufficiently in the Interport matches to prove himself a player of the highest calibre. Also in A. M. Gutierrez, the visitors have very reliable man indeed in any position.

However, the form shown by the others was nothing out of the ordinary. For instance, W. J. MacDermott, of whom so much was expected, was very disappointing from the Shanghai point of view; K. L. Swartzell, the American member of the team, was merely steady; and the same remark might be applied to J. M. C. Lopes, J. W. Brierley and A. M. Gerrard did not take part in the Interport matches.

While in actual play they might not have been so much better than the Hongkong men, in team spirit, however, they were immeasurably superior. As Hugh Wallace remarked at the Interport dinner, "every man pulled his weight." When one failed, another would succeed; and therein lay the secret of their success.

FAST GREENS

A contributory cause was also the speed of the green. Accustomed as they are to heavier greens, the Hongkong men found the fast greens at Kowloon Docks, Civil Service and Recreio too much for them. On the other hand, the Shanghai men, used to fast greens, found local conditions at this time of the year ideal for them.

Congratulations, Shanghai! The visitors have proved themselves popular in every club in the Colony. They leave by the Wing-sang on Thursday evening. Hongkong will be looking forward to seeing them here again shortly!

do not wish to conclude this article on a carping note, but I do feel that the decision made in the first Interport in calling it a draw was an inexplicable one. And that was why I was so pleased when Shanghai won the Third Interport; as holders of the Prentice Cup, the visitors were entitled to retain the trophy even if the series had ended in a tie of one game each, but by winning the third match, Shanghai's victory was clear-cut.

With the latest success, Shanghai has lengthened its margin of victories over Hongkong in the series, having won 12 to Hongkong's eight.

Prospects Of Triangular Rugger Interport Are Extremely Rosy

Although Shanghai has not definitely undertaken to send a team to Hongkong, there is every prospect of a triangular rugger Interport between Shanghai, Malaya and Hongkong taking place in the Colony during February, 1939.

Malaya has confirmed its decision to send a team here, and the latest information from Shanghai is to the effect that the northerners will make every effort to raise a strong representative side for the Interport with Hongkong. The possibility of a triangular Interport is expected to exert a strong influence on negotiations.

According to the Shanghai Times, the visit to Hongkong by a Shanghai team will be made over the Chinese New Year holidays. Whether this date will coincide with the time of arrival of the Malayan team is not yet known in Shanghai, but it remains for Colony officials to suggest a date agreeable to both Malaya and Shanghai.

The Shanghai Rugby Union Football Club is displaying great interest over the reported plans for a triangular Interport.

Len Harvey To Fight Eddie Phillips

Len Harvey and Eddie Phillips signed on October 8 to fight for the British heavyweight boxing championship at Harringay Arena, London, on November 17. Phillips was nominated by the British Boxing Board of Control as the leading contender for the title when it was vacated by Tommy Farr. Afterwards the Board stipulated that Phillips should meet Harvey for the championship. Phillips has been beaten twice already by Harvey, the last time being in Plymouth about three years ago. Harvey, who is thirty-one, holds the British cruiser-weight championship, and now has a chance of regaining the championship which he held before Jack Petersen took it from him in 1934.

Big Controversy In United States Over Foot-Fault Rules

The foot-faulting of A. K. Quist at the critical stage of the first set of his Davis Cup single against D. Budge at Germantown seems still to be the subject of much contention and criticism in the United States, writes F. R. Burrow in the Observer.

At the time of the incident the stands were roused to uproar, in sympathy with the Australian, who was repeatedly foot-faulted both on his first and second service. This upset both the players, and a fine match was spoilt.

But it must be said, and with the utmost emphasis, that it was not spoilt by the foot-fault judge, but by the player who repeatedly broke Rule 7. It was complained that Quist's infractions of the rule was "only a technical infraction," and asked why he had not been foot-faulted earlier in the match, but only when the crisis of the set arrived.

Now there is no such thing as a "technical" infraction of a rule. Either the server is serving fairly, or he is serving unfairly. If he is serving unfairly he ought to be penalised and must be penalised by a linesman or foot-fault judge (if there is one) who knows his duty.

APT TO FORGET

As to only putting the law in motion at the moment of crisis, it is quite possible (though, to those who have watched Quist play, improbable) that his service had been fair up to the point at which he began to be penalised.

It is just at these critical moments that even an ordinary fair server is apt to forget his normal strictness in his anxiety to get to the net; and, since these critical moments are just as critical for his opponent as for himself, it is all the more necessary that he should be prevented from gaining an unfair advantage—even if it is unintentionally unfair—over him.

Wimbledon habits will not have forgotten a similar incident when J. H. Crawford was playing F. J. Perry in 1934. In the final of the championship, Crawford, normally a scrupulously fair server, was making his last stand, coming in on every thing and raking all on a net attack.

At match-point to Perry, Crawford served and followed in, only to be foot-faulted for infringing the rule by swinging over in his haste to get to the net. He served his second service into the net! And the match was over.

VERY NECESSARY

That foot-fault judge was bitterly

attacked by a great many people who ought to have known better; but as he very pertinently inquired, "Is a foot-fault not a foot-fault when it is at match-point?" To which no reply is possible. It was unfortunate; but the fault was the player's, not the linesman's.

The rule is a necessary rule; without it, players might serve from any part of the court they liked. And, so long as it is a rule, it should be enforced, not only in "high" places, but in the ordinary run of tournament play. Budge never foot-faulted; Perry was a scrupulously fair server. If men like these can be "world-champions" while obeying the rules, lesser fry ought to be proud to follow their example.

One of the troubles is that a great many players break the rule without realising that they do so; they have not the slightest intention of being unfair to their opponents. But until some linesman or umpire is courageous enough to pull them up, it is not surprising that they go on breaking the rule nearly every time they serve.

SPECTACLES AND FOOTBALL

If footballers wear spectacles they ought to have unbreakable lenses. So the Football Association has decided. The question was raised at the monthly meeting of the Lancashire Football Association Council. Bury Amateur League wrote that two players wear glasses. The League feared they might injure themselves or other players and therefore asked for a ruling.

An F.A. official stated that there was nothing in the rules to prevent a bespectacled player taking part in a match, but the Association recommended that they should use unbreakable lenses. There are no bespectacled players in first-class football to-day. "Old boys" among the fans, however, will recall Mitchell, the Manchester City goalkeeper of 10 or 12 years ago, who wore his glasses while playing.

BRITISH GOLFERS IN LINE WITH THOSE OF AMERICA & CANADA

(By Geoffrey Simpson)

London, Sept. 29.

We are getting on in golf... the R. & A., as we guessed, have made the 14-club limit official. From the Spring it will be against the law and horribly un sporting to use more than 14 clubs, or even carry a bag holding more than that number.

It brings British golfers into line with those of the United States and Canada, who have already made it a rule, but do we care very much?

Yes, we do. It means that the rusty iron we carted around for no reason at all except that it was our old favourite and looked well in the bag has got to go, because at present we are over the limit.

Golfers are queer folk. So many like to carry a bag full of clubs, half of which they do not use.

In the women's championship at Aldeburgh this week, Pam Burton has played the grandest golf with a bag of 16 clubs (including one very old iron), eight of which she never touched.

Now Miss Burton must cast two aside, because she is out of order in carrying 16. But I doubt whether she has ever played with 14 clubs during a round in her life. And that is true of almost every golfer who carries a large bag.

AVERAGE BAG—12

An interesting piece of information is that a check on the number of clubs employed nowadays has been made at Aldeburgh this week.

A representative of a manufacturing firm has been going round counting the number of clubs the women golfers have taken on to the course, and his statistics show that the average bag is 12—three woods and nine irons.

The same figure is probably true of male golfers, so that the restriction is not going to make golf more difficult.

In fact, the chief reaction of golfers to the new rule will be that it is superfluous.

At the same time it is advisable to remember that the rule exists, for the penalty, if caught in the dread act of carrying one club too many, is disqualification.

ANOTHER BALL?

What is more likely to get golfers by the ears is the announcement that the R. & A. believe the time is opportune for a reduction of flight in the golf ball. The question is to be considered by the committee.

In this they will be opposed. Another eccentricity of the golfer is that he likes to be flattered, and when he gets a ball he can drive five yards farther than any other he has used, he is as pleased as an angler who has landed a catch he can talk about.

The golf ball has been experimented with for years, but the general opinion is that the present ball cannot be improved upon.

I have it on the authority of a big manufacturer that another 40 to 50 yards "carry" could be added to the golf ball. "At the same time, the stuff of scientists we employ could as easily turn out a ball that would travel 50 yards less," he said.

"But whether we put extra distance on or took it off, the game would be spoiled. I do not see any cause for readjustment."

In my opinion, if the flight of the ball is reduced it will interfere seriously with the game of the ordinary player. And it is the ordinary golfer who matters most, though there is a tendency in high places to forget this and to think only of the front-rankers who get their names in the papers.

MAN WHO MATTERS

In all matters such as this it is the majority for whom the authorities should legislate.

It is the Saturday afternoon player in cricket, the small club man in lawn tennis, and the 16-handicap enthusiast in golf who make the wheels of sport go round.

How often are their interests forgotten!

Of course, it does not follow that the R. & A. will change the ball, even if they mean to talk about it. It is hopeful, at any rate, that the manufacturers have not been officially consulted... and not even the R. & A. can alter the ball without the help of the trade.

Craigengower Has Had A Good Year

Annual Meeting Held Yesterday

A satisfactory report was presented at the forty-fifth annual general meeting of the Craigengower Cricket Club, held yesterday. The financial position of the Club was declared to be good, but there was a big increase in members' accounts outstanding. The President, Mr. B. W. Bradbury, warned that unless there was a marked improvement, the cash position of the Club would be seriously affected.

Presenting the report and statement of accounts, Mr. Bradbury said:

The annual report and statement of accounts having been in your hands for the period prescribed by the rules of the Club, I will, with your permission, take them as read.

Before proceeding with the business of the meeting, I desire, on behalf of the Club, to express sympathy with the relatives of the late Mr. W. D. Bradwood and Mr. E. H. Inchcombe, both of whom passed away during the year. As you are perhaps aware, Mr. Bradwood was the founder of the Craigengower Cricket Club, and on the foundation laid by him, nearly half a century ago, the Club has grown to what it is to-day. As a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Bradwood and Mr. Inchcombe I would ask you all to rise and remain standing for a brief moment.

Your Committee is very gratified in being able to present to you a Balance Sheet that must be considered very satisfactory. The profit for the year, viz. $326.80, shows an increase of $122.15 over last year. This, itself, represents a good showing, but when you take into consideration the very liberal allowance for depreciation, plus a sum of $500 transferred to a Doubtful Debts Reserve Account, I think you will all agree that "anti-inflation" is the correct word to use.

Bar earnings for the year, as you will see from the income and expenditure account, show a decrease of $228.88 over last year, which is probably due to more conservative spending on the part of our members, owing to uncertain conditions. Still, the result is very pleasing and Mr. Basa and his colleagues of the Bar Sub-Committee are to be commended for a job well done.

Billiard receipts are down; in fact, the revenue from this source has not been in keeping with the large amount invested in putting the tables (particularly Table No. 1) in first class condition. There has been some discussion as regards the method of paying for these games. I trust that this can be cleared up satisfactorily and that, with the advent of various capellans, better returns will be obtained. I should like to take this opportunity of thanking the various members whose helpful advice made the work on the improvement of the tables very much simpler.

Subscriptions showed a healthy rise, this being due to the increase which came into effect last year. With an increase in new members, entrance fees are also up, and this is indeed pleasing. As you will observe, income under sundry receipts reached a very substantial figure, and members who have studied the accounts carefully will readily appreciate what this source of income means to the Club. Allow me to compliment the Social Sub-Committee for their splendid work. The Club is indeed grateful to them and to the various members who have assisted from time to time.

Expenses Increase
Turning to expenses, there has been a rather heavy increase all round. Stationery has gone up, but the increase here can be accounted for by the large quantity of tombola tickets used. Rates and taxes have increased and this will go up even further next year, since our assessment rate has been raised considerably.

Cost of tea has risen by quite a margin, and, although this has been looked into very carefully, I do not anticipate any appreciable decrease, owing to the higher cost of necessities.

Bad debts written off is small, but I had hoped for an even smaller figure. However, I am still optimistic enough to hope that this item can be entirely eliminated in future.

Turning to the balance sheet, your particular attention is directed to the amount of depreciation on the building, gear, furniture and fixtures and crockery, amounting in all to $2,000.51. On the advice of our auditors, a greater allowance was made under this heading, and I am sure you will agree that this is a very wise move. Our Auditors also recommended transferring $500 to a Bad and Doubtful Debts Account, and as you will have noticed, this recommendation has been carried out.

Under assets, you will observe that bowls gear and tennis gear have been increased considerably, this being due to the purchase of a new lawn mower, which became an absolute necessity. New tennis nets and screens were also obtained during the year.

The heavy increase under furniture and fixtures is accounted for by the purchase of a large number of tables and chairs which were required for our whist and tombola functions.

Our cash position is quite sound, and, although we have less cash on hand than last year, this is offset by our having replaced the sum of $2,000.00 on fixed deposit.

Summing up, I wish to reiterate that the financial position of the Club is satisfactory, but there is one discordant note to sound, and that is the big increase in members' accounts outstanding. This is most disconcerting, and unless there is a marked improvement, it will not long before our cash position will be seriously affected. I should like to take this opportunity of appealing to the members concerned to see that their accounts are paid more promptly in future. This is one way in which they can really help the Club, and I am confident that those of you who have been tardy in the past will now appreciate what this means to the Club and will not fail to co-operate more fully in this respect.

Sporting Activities

And now, I come to the sporting activities of the Club during the past year. First mention must be made of our cricketers, who did extremely well. The senior team shared the championship with the I.R.C. after two undecided replays, from which we emerged with colours flying. The junior team finished runners-up and was unfortunate in not winning the championship. I am particularly pleased with the success of the cricketers, for, in my report just a year ago, I predicted that the happy blending of youth and experience that we possessed would soon show results. That all the more gratifying. Had the Interport Cricket taken place this year, at least two of our young players must have gained recognition.

Turning to lawn bowls, I cannot say that we had a particularly successful season. The first and second season teams finished third in the League and the third team finally dropped into fifth place. Enthusiasm was well maintained, particularly among our younger players, who, when given an opportunity in the newly formed Valley Cup Competition at the end of the season, performed splendidly, and Craigengower's name was the first to be engraved on this trophy.

I trust the keenness among our younger players will continue, and if it does, then we need not be pessimistic regarding the Club's future lawn bowls prospects. Our tennis section has had a very enjoyable year, although, perhaps, not so successful, despite the fact that our "B" team were again in running for the championship right up to the last game. With so many players available, I am sure we will do better in this department. I should like to take this opportunity of congratulating Mr. George Chon on winning the Club singles championship as well as other events, and I shall look forward with pleasure to the time in the not distant future when more important trophies will be added to his list.

In conclusion, I desire to express my appreciation of the help given to me by the outgoing Committee. Despite minor criticisms, they have done good work. The splendid attendance at committee meetings is indicative of the interest they have taken in their work. Details of individual attendances will be given by the Hon. Secretary. The resignation from the Committee of Dr. Allenza during the year was regretted. His place was not filled as members next in rotation declined to serve.

To the members, I must express sincere thanks for their helpful co-operation throughout the season. The report and accounts were adopted unanimously on the proposal of Mr. Bradbury, seconded by Mr. W. Ward.

Election of Officers
Officers elected for the year 1938-39 were: President, Mr. B. W. Bradbury; Vice-President, Mr. C. S. Rossetti; Secretary, Mr. W. K. Way; Treasurer, Mr. A. E. Coates; 1st XI Cricket Captain, Mr. E. Zimmerman; 2nd XI Cricket Captain, Mr. B. R. Innes; Vice-Captain, Mr. J. L. Youngs; Committee, Messrs. R. Basa, U. M. Omar, N. P. Karanjia, W. J. Howard, A. B. Hanson, J. W. Leonard, L. C. R. Souza and T. L. Locke.

There was considerable debate over the question of members' outstanding accounts. Mr. Way replied that the Club was very lenient in its treatment of members than many other Clubs in the Colony. The Club did not discriminate between its members, and he urged that accounts be promptly rendered, otherwise the finances would be seriously jeopardised.

Further discussion then ensued on the question of billiards. Mr. J. L. Landolt maintained that members, especially those who earned small salaries, should be allowed to sign chits for games, instead of paying cash.

Mr. Way replied that the system of paying cash had been instituted after much deliberation by the billiards sub-committee, who had called in competent members to assist in the question, and had come to the conclusion that such a system was the best.

He was supported by Mr. Rossetti, who said it was the considered opinion of the sub-committee that the Club should revert to the system of cash payment for a game of billiards. This decision had been made when interest in billiards was at its height. The system of signing chits contained certain drawbacks, among which was the failure of members to sign them after games.

He felt that if members supported the sub-committee in its endeavours to assist the members rather than criticise it, the Club would be in a better position to supply members with more efficient billiard-markers. After further debate, Mr. Landolt proposed that members be allowed to sign chits for billiard games. Mr. E. Zimmerman proposed an amendment that the matter be left to the sub-committee to be formed, and this was carried.

The usual honoraria of $200 each to the Secretary and Treasurer, and $100 to the auditor was voted. Messrs. T. A. Martin and Company were re-elected auditors.

The meeting closed with votes of thanks to the President and outgoing Committee for their work during the past year.

Australian Cricketers Return Home

Expect Serious Opposition From England

Melbourne, Oct. 25.
The Australian cricketers returned to Australia to-day. Don Bradman declared he had fully recovered from his recent injury and would be able to play in the match between the Test team and the rest of Australia at Melbourne on December 9. Bradman also said that when the next test series was played in Australia, serious opposition might be expected from England as she had many promising young players. He added that he thought five days long enough for a result in one test match. —Reuter Bulletin.

OUR GUIDE TO THE CINEMAS

"Test Pilot" (King's Theatre, to-day).—As violently exciting as the scream of a speed plane in a power dive, the latest and probably the best of the air pictures evokes the atmosphere of terror and tension in which the test pilot lives. There are several spectacular air scenes. The playing throughout is splendid. Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore are all splendid in the cast.

"Bulldog Drummond in Africa" (Queen's Theatre, to-day).—Latest of the adventures of the famous Sapper character, set this time in an African jungle, with all its opportunities for cinematic thrills. John Howard again plays the little role, and Heather Angel is the romantic interest.

"In Old Mexico" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—William Boyd in the character of Hopalong Cassidy again gets the better of his enemies below the Rio Grande. Grand scenery, thrills and a better-than-usual story.

"Over The Wall" (Oriental Theatre, to-day).—A dramatic tale of convicts and their attempts to get away. It centres around a man falsely imprisoned for murder.

"Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—An exciting story of the turf, three juveniles, Ronald Sinclair, Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, and a horse providing the interest. An entertaining film.

PONIES CLASSIFIED

Just in Time to "B" Class; Harvest View and Noddy and Pride to "C" Class; Cape Cormorin, Mac's Adventure, National Dignity and Sen Dragon to "E" Class.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed Full of Vigor.
The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, aching and the world looks black.
Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those famous Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Togoland Increases Its Wealth

Geneva, Oct. 25. The Mandates Commission to-day examined the report on Togoland. CHOLERA TOTAL EXCEEDS 500

The total cases in the present cholera epidemic passed the 500 mark yesterday when a further two cases were reported. There were also four notifications of dysentery, bringing the aggregate up to 838. Other notifications included three cases of diphtheria, two of enteric fever, and one each of measles, meningitis and puerperal fever.

The machine was roaring only a few hundred feet above the ground, endeavoring to pick up her bearings when she crashed into the side of Mount Dandenong Range, 30 miles east of Melbourne. The machine caught fire, incinerating all but seven of the eighteen persons aboard, the seven being flung clear of the plane.

STORK SAVED HIM

The wife of a young lorry driver, Joseph Callard, of Ashby-road, Upper Parkstone, Dorset, was expecting a happy event. In his hurry to get home Callard was gonged on the main London-to-Bournemouth road for travelling at 40 to 42 miles an hour. At Ramsey Borough Police Court, Hampshire, recently Callard wrote pleading guilty and his employer, who appeared on his behalf, explained that on the day of the offence Callard's wife was expecting a baby. "I hope the baby arrived all right," commented Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon (the chairman), who announced that the summons would be dismissed.

The first Japanese to reach Canton before the war Japanese machines were not allowed in Chinese territory landed on the outskirts of the city at 11.10 a.m. on Tuesday and departed almost immediately with photographs and news-reels for Japan.

It is announced that the Japanese Consul-General in Canton, which has been entrusted to the care of the French Consul General since the beginning of hostilities, will be formally re-opened on November 3.

The first Japanese Consul-General in Canton will be Mr. Katsuo Okazaki, who is now in Hongkong.

PEARL RIVER TROUBLES

Japanese warships and transports have not yet succeeded in reaching Canton. At 10 a.m. yesterday they were about mid-way up the Pearl River.

The armada's journey up the river has been considerably hampered by mines, scores of these deadly submarine explosives having been laid in the river by the Chinese.

Several mine-sweepers are proceeding the ships.

So far, the Japanese ships have had to dynamite their way through four booms across the river.

Japanese troops claim that they will occupy Fatsan to-day. The city is burning fiercely, having been set alight before the entire populace evacuated.

MACAO'S PROBLEM

The Macao correspondent of the "Telegraph" reports that the influx of refugees into the Portuguese Colony has reached phenomenal proportions, as all steamers from nearby ports and highways from Shensi and other inland places disgorge their constant streams of humanity into the Colony.

An average of 8,000 persons daily has been arriving since the beginning of the week.

A considerable number of the better-class people are making their way by ship to Hongkong after passing through the Macao barriers. It is estimated that the population of Macao has been increased by well over 20,000 in the last few days.

BRITISH REVENUE INCREASES

London, Oct. 25. Exchequer returns show that total ordinary revenue amounts to £362,538,745, compared with £359,065,160 at the corresponding date last year. The yield from the National Defence Contribution is now £241,500,000. The total expenditure, less self-balancing items, is £539,814,227 compared with £467,388,211 a year ago.—British Wireless.

CANNIBALS IN ROYAL PARK

While most of the wild birds in London's parks are becoming progressively tamer and astonished country visitors to the capital, the pelicans at St. James's, favourites of the crowd, have turned cannibal.

Their "abominable behaviour" is recorded in the 1937 report of the Committee on Bird Sanctuaries in Royal Parks.

Tufted ducks are the victims and all the blame is showered on the recently-introduced North American pelican, "who seems to prefer a diet of tufted duck to any other."

Now he has taught all the old pelicans how to catch them, and the pelicans should go, or at least be shut up during the nesting period.

NIGHTINGALES RETURN

But the parks have pleasant records. During the year Nightingales returned to Richmond and Greenwich.

Waxwings visited Kew for the first time and the Round Pond sheltered London's first red-necked grebe.

Shelducks in St. James's took advantage of the Coronation flood-lighting to improve their toilet on a raft in the lake.

A Scots gamekeeper, returned home after a holiday in London, was asked what impressed him most in the capital.

"Seeing the cushie-doo (wood pigeons) in St. James's Park," he replied, "eating from a man's hand."

TO WED SOON

The following forthcoming weddings are announced: Mr. Rudolf Kaufmann, engineer, and Miss Claudia Biogukanski, residing at the Trocadero Hotel, Kowloon; Mr. Lo Yim-pan, preacher, and Miss Yau Sau-hung, of 58 Un Chau Street, second floor, Shumshui; and Mr. Mal Lok-cheung, civil servant, Kwangtung Provincial Government, and Miss Chan Yi-siu, of 4 Shui Wah Fong, Hongkong.

the three cities is not going according to plan.

A "Reuter" message states that sanguinary street fighting is in progress in Wuchang, the southern city, where the two advance detachments of Japanese entering to take possession of the walled city met strong Chinese resistance.

The units advanced on Wuchang from the Yangtze bank after taking possession of Kollen on Tuesday. They arrived at Wuchang last night, and began entering the city at 4.30 o'clock this morning.

BLAZING FIRES

Wuchang is blazing fiercely. Nearly all the bund cotton spinneries and factories have been dynamited, the wireless station is a mass of ruins, and government buildings, which are concentrated in the walled city area, have been reduced by the Chinese.

Included in the buildings destroyed is the one in which Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek resided during the long Yangtze campaign. Entrance into the walled city of Wuchang was made through Playwang-wen Gate, just inside which are the barracks and High Normal School.

One of the Japanese detachments is reported to have pushed through Wuchang to the bund.

No attempt has yet been made to occupy Hanyang, which is divided from the Japanese by the Yangtze and Han rivers.

Proceeded by a motorised column, the vanguard of the Hiran contingent forced-marched along the Oeheng-wang highway.

Yanglo, on the north bank of the Yangtze 12½ miles east of Hankow, was captured by the Yoshida and Yuda detachments, which advanced from Hankow from Hwangyang through the Yangtze River and Changtu Lake areas.

Central News reports that fighting on the east and north Homan fronts has relaxed into an ominous lull.

DOCTOR'S VIEW OF ALCOHOL Strong Condemnation

The National Federation of Christian Workers among Poor Children held their annual rally and conference in Manchester. They visited the Central Library and listened to an address by Mr. C. Nowell, Chief Librarian of Manchester. After tea at Wood Street Mission Hall, they conferred under the chairmanship of Councillor T. R. Ackroyd, and listened to Mr. Arthur Black, of London. Many of the delegates attended divine service at the Albert Hall, to which they were welcomed by the Rev. F. J. Gould. In the afternoon Dr. E. Vipont Brown addressed the conference on "Temperance" in the Charter Street Ragged Schools, Danzig Street.

Dr. Brown attacked the use of alcohol from the point of view of a medical man, and said that it had been shown by experiment that alcohol deteriorated the nervous centres. The first effect of alcohol was to paralyse the highest nerve centres. Alcohol was one of the predisposing causes of consumption; it affected a man's judgment, destroyed his moral sense, and weakened his willpower and sense of honour. It was one of the causes of insanity and of melancholia.

It had been said that alcohol was a blessing in disguise because it carried off those who were least fitted to survive, but it affected men of the keenest sensibilities and sometimes the cleverest and the best.

Dr. Brown went on to discuss the effect of alcohol when taken in small quantities, and denied the popular theory that alcohol effectively warmed the body.

A hundred years ago, he said, there was a case of a member of the Society of Friends who had applied for insurance and been quoted a higher premium because he was an abstainer from alcohol. He was told that a young man who neglected the gifts of God was not expected to live long. Nowadays many insurance companies quoted a higher premium for non-abstainers and their action did not arise from any fanatical temperance opinions, but from hard business sense.

One questioner asked Dr. Brown whether alcohol should be used as a palliative in cases where certain workers were liable to suffer from lung troubles caused by dust, and he said that far from being a palliative, alcohol encouraged tuberculosis.

Mr. Nowell told the delegates when he conducted them round the Central Library, that although teaching a child to read and write was extremely important,

Nurse For Audience

Every time the big scene is approached in Emilie Zola's novel "Thou Shalt Not," at the Playhouse Theatre, London, a nurse quietly slips into the auditorium, ready to deal with fainting women.

A girl sitting in the stalls screamed out last night, "Stop it! Stop it!" and collapsed. An old man at the back rose in his seat, exclaimed "I can't stand it," and stumbled out.

The scene is that in which Nancy Price, as an old woman, discovers that a young married couple staying at her house are the murderers of her son, and a member of the theatre staff said.

"We usually anticipate some kind of a disturbance in the audience at this point. So far the action of the play has not suffered interference, but as a precaution members of the staff are stationed here and there to keep their eyes open for any faints." "A nurse has also been engaged to deal with casualties."

BOY CLOSED THE SCHOOL

Two boys, aged 10 and 11, who had a grudge against their teacher, took their revenge by wrecking the school so badly that it had to be closed for a day.

Windows and furniture were smashed with a hammer and paint squeezed all over a room.

At Pontefract (York) juvenile court recently the boys were accused of breaking and entering the school at Hemsworth, committing malicious damage and stealing money.

One boy's parents attributed the action to "the pictures."

The Bench decided to suspend judgment for six months for a report on the boys' home conditions.

what all teachers must realise was that it was equally important to educate the child in taste, and to encourage him or her to read the right books.

Rotary Club Hears About Education

Mr. W. L. Handyside, Headmaster of Central British School, and Acting Inspector of English Schools, addressed the Hongkong Rotary Club yesterday on education and stressed the value to both the business community and to pupils, of the extra year at school in which the student learned to deal with the human element in the capacity of Prefect, House or School Captain.

It was a mistake to be forced, by the absence of a commercial course in the school curriculum, to take a pupil away from school in these important years so that he could become proficient in stenography or type-writing.

The speaker used Herbert Spencer's comment on the technique of removing dents from iron plates by beating everywhere except on the actual spot, in reference to such local problems as mul tal, slum clearance, town planning, child labour and social evil.

Every school should be a centre of communal life culture, craft and health for both young and old. Education, free and compulsory along such lines appeared to the speaker to be the right line of approach.

Nineteenth century European conditions began to disappear with the introduction of compulsory education and the gradual raising of the school age.

CZECH IN COURT: DID NOT REPORT HIS ARRIVAL

Summoned before Mr. H. R. Butters at the Central Magistracy this morning for failing to report his arrival in the Colony within 48 hours, Karel Langer, of Prince Edward Road, a Czechoslovakian subject, was cautioned.

Langer pleaded that, when he left Shanghai, the situation involving his country in Europe was tense, and he forgot to register with the police on arrival.

Sub-Inspector H. E. Langley said Langer arrived in Hongkong on board the Conte Verde on October 1, and wrote a letter dated October 6 to the police, reporting his arrival. The letter, however, did not reach the police until October 11.

KOWLOON CAR BANDIT EPIDEMIC

THREE CARS STOLEN IN 48 HOURS

THE EPIDEMIC of car thefts in Hongkong is reaching alarming proportions. During the last 48 hours, three cars have been removed from parking areas in Kowloon.

Following the theft of two cars from the Gascolgne Road park near the Alhambra Theatre, another car was stolen yesterday afternoon from the Hankow Road park, near the Y.M.C.A.

The latter vehicle is the property of Mr. J. H. S. Duncan and is a Morris Eight tourer, No. 3423.

Mr. Duncan's car was observed travelling towards the Star Ferry at four o'clock this morning. It was occupied by four Chinese.

Cars stolen yesterday were Nos. 2372, owned by Mr. J. Ng, and 2403 property of Lt. Smith, Royal Artillery.

WUCHANG OCCUPIED, REPORT

Wuchang, Oct. 26. The city of Wuchang was completely occupied by the Japanese Army units at 11 o'clock this morning. Immediately following their arrival in the walled city, the Japanese troops opened mopping-up operations to complete their occupation.

The Wuchang airfield, 2½ miles south of the city, was also occupied by Japanese troops at 11.30 o'clock this morning. Various establishments attached to the airfield as well as the barracks in its neighbourhood are badly damaged, partly as the result of the repeated Japanese aerial attacks and partly by the hands of the Chinese troops evacuating the district.—Domei.

Continuing their mopping up operations all last night, the Japanese troops which entered the city on Tuesday evening at noon to-day occupied the railway station a mile east of the Japanese Concession.—Domei.

H. K. SWIMMERS BACK TO-DAY

After a successful tour of Malaya and the South Seas, the Hongkong Aquatic Stars returned to the Colony to-day by the B.I. steamer Tilawa.

During their stay in Malaya, the Hongkong swimmers maintained an unbeaten record, beating teams in Penang and Ipoh.

At a carnival at the Chinese Swimming Club in Penang on October 16, the tourists won five events against Penang's two and Singapore's one.

Singapore's solitary win was through Sim Boon-hoo, who, in winning the 100 metres backstroke, established a new China record of 1 min. 19 4/5 secs. The second man, Kee Somo-bee, also beat the China record of 1 min. 23 3/4 secs.

In the same meet, Ng Min broke another China record when he swam the 100 metres free style in 63 2/3 secs. The old mark was 65.7 secs.

"Missing Link" Animals In Hongkong En Route To American Zoos

EIGHT FURRY LITTLE ANIMALS of unknown species arrived in Hongkong yesterday in the care of Clifford M. Pressnall, American free-lance photographer, aboard the freighter Granville.

SEVEN FEMALES AND ONE MALE, they came from the Malayan jungle, from where they were taken in a packing case to Singapore. It took Mr. Pressnall more than a year to catch them.

"I don't know what sort of animals they are," he said to-day. He has sent photographs of them to the seven largest zoos in the world, but the animals cannot be classified, but the animals are something between raccoons and squirrels, but move with the slow lethargic ease of an Australian koala bear. They have paws like human hands, bodies like bearmonkeys, eyes like an owl and have a claw on the index finger of their feet with which they scratch themselves.

Mr. Pressnall is taking the animals to an American zoo to let scientists determine if they have the necessary characteristics of the "missing link."

PETS FOR HOLLYWOOD

"I think they would make fine pets for some of the movie stars in Hollywood," said Mr. Pressnall, who hopes to pose one of the leading actresses with his animals.

He exhibited a thumb, which the cat-like fangs of one of the little animals had penetrated the nail and flesh to the bone.

The animals don't like to be picked up and will bite when lifted from the ground, although appearing curious when left to crawl up an arm or leg at their will.

The male one is Pressnall's special pet. It crawls all over him when allowed to do so and is the most affectionate of the bunch. None of them have been named, as it is too hard to tell them apart.

Pressnall said he would not sell them at any price though he could not give any idea of what each animal was worth.

FROM SIAM BORDER

The animals have several names though none can be taken as scientifically authentic. The natives of the Malayan district where they were found call them "Kong-hang", which means a slow moving brown animal. They came from the Shadli country, inland from Penang, about 350 miles north of Singapore and 100 miles south of the Siamese border.

Pressnall, a heavy built, bearded man of 40, says the animals will only live on bananas. They don't drink any water. They have two tongues, one a long red tongue which they use in eating more than they do with their teeth, which are like a cat's, and the other tongue, a semi-cartilaginous one, underneath the red tongue.

They are about nine or ten inches long and weigh about 2½ lbs. each. They are nocturnal, sleeping in the day-time and prowling about their cage at night. In their natural state they seldom descend from trees.

SQUEAL LIKE RABBITS

When picked up the strange animals squeal like rabbits, and when playing with each other they growl. They have short flat tails, and have limbs of a monkey.

The reason for the preservation of the species is a mystery to Pressnall, as they have no apparent means of self protection. Their colouring is not protective, and although strong and able to bite they live among all sorts of predatory animals, including snakes, birds and wild-cats.

The ship Granville will sail from port this afternoon for Los Angeles direct with its strange animal cargo. When the ship gets into colder latitudes, Mr. Pressnall will take them into his cabin so that the steam-heating will keep them warm.

He was warned in advance of the manner in which a sudden change of temperature might affect his animals when one of the females had a baby which died two months ago. The young animal was born fully furred, weighing about a ounce, with a set of teeth and within half-an-hour of birth was slowly crawling up the wire mesh of the cage in front of its mother, who apparently thought nothing of its astonishing precocity. Later the young one was trampled or bitten to death in the cage. Pressnall has it preserved in a bottle of alcohol aboard the ship.

Stole Camera From Car

Mr. J. T. Wilson of St. John's Cathedral was the complainant in a larceny case against a man named Yuen Kau, 20, before Mr. E. Himmsworth at the Kowloon Magistrate's court to-day.

Yuen admitted having stolen a Kodak camera and leather case, the property of Mrs. Wilson, from a car parked near the Central Radio Shop, Nathan Road, on October 22.

He was arrested in Canton Road by a Chinese detective on the evening of the theft, with the camera wrapped up in a parcel. Taken to the Water Police Station he was on his first appearance in Court, charged with unlawful possession of the camera. He was remanded for 48 hours as the owner of the camera had not then been located.

This morning, Det-Sergeant A. F. Cochrane withdrew the unlawful possession charge and substituted in its place one of larceny.

Yuen, who had a previous conviction, was sentenced to two months hard labour.
